Little Resistance

By the Associated Press

Cairo, Egypt (Saturday), Feb. 8.—A desperate Italian attempt to crash through a British cordon south of Bengasi ended in disaster with all Italian resistance in that city wiped out and the shattered fragments of Marshal Rodolfo Graziani's army fleeing west across the central Libyan desert, it was officially reported today.

The British high command said 60 Italian tanks were smashed, "heavy losses" inflicted, and a "large number" of prisoners taken, including an army commander, a corps commander and many other senior officers.

"In operations leading up to the capture of Bengasi, an armored formation made a forced march of 150 miles in 30 hours, brushing aside resistance en route to close the last line of retreat," a British communique said.

"Surprised by the speed of this brilliant exploit the enemy, endeavoring to withdraw from Bengasi, found themselves finally hemmed in.

"Numerically superior Italian armored forces supported by infantry and artillery then made determined efforts to break through our cordon.

"Every attempt was repulsed

Bulgars Fear Germans Will Invade Soon

Railroad Service Cut by 30%, Nazis Bridging Danube

By the Associated Press

Sofia, Bulgaria, Feb. 7.—Bulgaria ordered a new restriction of train service tonight amid widespread reports that the German army was planning to enter this country.

One traveler from the Rumanian frontier said German troop activity indicated an intention of moving soon, perhaps in 48 hours.

But an American traveler said a pontoon bridge being laid across the Danube had not been completed and that troop movements across the river from Rumania into Bulgaria would not be possible in the near future.

This much was known definitely—Bulgaria for the second time in a month curtailed passenger train service on routes toward the Rumanian, Greek, Yugoslav and Turkish borders, effective tomorrow.

While it was announced that the curtailment by 30 per cent of the trains on these routes was to permit transportation of new Bulgarian troops called this week to replace others on duty, observers said the same action would be taken to prepare for an emergency. Curtailment of service two weeks ago, it was explained, was to permit repair of locomotives.

Highly reliable political informants said Turkey possibly has 20 divisions on the Bulgarian frontier.

Vichy Awaits Laval Return To Cabinet

Copyright by New York Times

Vichy, Feb. 7.—Admiral Jean Darlan, who went to Paris to negotiate the return to the government of former premier Pierre Laval, is expected back in Vichy tomorrow night and interest now turns on whether Laval will accompany him. There was no information here to show that the final accord had been reached, but the feeling gained ground that a settlement would follow these conversations within a short time.

Gen. Maxime Weygand's broadcast proclaiming to North Africa that France would never permit the occupation of Bizerte or Tunisia showed that concessions have not been all on one side. There was a broadcast, too, today from the Stuttgart radio praising Marshal Petain's spirit of comprehension in strange contrast to the tone of that station in recent weeks and contrasting with the nature of the broadcasts that have been heard from Paris.

There is belief here that in view of Marshal Petain's readiness to restore Laval as a guarantee of future collaboration the latter would not insist upon his first proposal that he would be reinstated with enhanced powers.

If Laval returns, there is some

Challenge to Youth

Young People's Programs Start As Mission Nears Climax Here

By Robert Tate Allan
The Post's Church Editor

While some phases of the National Christian Mission reached their climax last night, the young people's programs began — with speakers urging 2,000 of them to accept greater Christian responsibility in the world crisis.

They came from every part of Washington, Maryland and Virginia to pack National City Christian Church and Luther Place Memorial churches at Thomas Circle, and in the former place heard Dr. E. Stanley Jones say that the "Kingdom of Mammon" has caused the wars and depressions.

Meanwhile another crowd of young people—students at George Washington University—was told by Dr. Adolf Keller that the world today is "really a battlefield where the forces of God and the forces of evil are struggling with each other."

"We, as Christians," the Swiss churchman said, "have not to struggle in this world simply with flesh and blood, with our egotistic instincts, but with principalities and powers." Dr. Jones shared the program with him.

Before 1,500 young people at the National City Church, Dr. Jones said in part:

"The kingdom of the animal stands for mutual slaughter and the Kingdom of God for mutual aid. The kingdom of the animal stands for reckless competition and the Kingdom of God stands for

Doctor Calls Group Health Plan Sound

Hugh Cabot, Former Mayo Surgeon, Says System Is Best for Patient and Physician

By Gerald G. Gross
Post Staff Writer

Punctuated frequently by spirited clashes between counsel, the third day of the "doctors' trial" yesterday elicited testimony from a noted surgeon that group medical service is superior to individual practice and the Group Health Association principle is quite sound.

First witness to be called, occupying the stand all day, Dr. Hugh Cabot asserted on direct examination that group practice was best for patient and doctor alike, and stuck to his guns under a withering cross-examination by the defense.

A former member of the Mayo Clinic staff and now head of Health Service, Inc., in Boston, Dr. Cabot himself is a member of the American Medical Association, which is being tried in District Court, along with three other societies and 20 physicians, on charges of violating the Sherman antitrust law.

Attorney to Be Called

When Justice James M. Proctor called a recess at 4 p. m. until 10 a. m. Monday, the 68-year-old surgeon, who is one of the Massachusetts Cabots, had been on the stand five hours, deducting a 45-minute lunch period.

Last night William E. Leahy, of defense counsel, revealed the identity of the "surprise witness" to whom he referred in his opening statement to the jury. He is J. S. Flannery, a Washington attorney, associated with the firm of McKenney, Flannery & Craighill.

Favors Pool of Doctors

Leahy's numerous tilts with John Henry Lewin, of the prosecution, and an occasional bon mot or Back Bay witticism by the sly-humored Dr. Cabot enlivened a day devoted principally to drawing from Cabot his views on group practice—medical service by a "pool" of physicians, in contrast with individual treatment.

A summary of Dr. Cabot's testimony would show:

That he believes the cooperative clinic idea is beneficial to the public, providing them with services they otherwise could not afford; and to the doctor, eliminating "waste motion" and offering him economic security.

That, in his opinion, the person with an average income cannot afford to pay doctor bills, generally having to choose between going into debt, undergoing less treatment than the case requires, or throwing himself upon charity.

That "free choice of physician" actually means little to the layman, who is not equipped to pick a doctor to the best advantage, according to one who has been practicing medicine since 1898.

Called from Boston to testify by the Government, which seeks to prove the organized doctors broke the law in attempting to obstruct the Federal workers' cooperative called Group Health Association, Dr. Cabot was dealt with inten-

Allis-Chalmers Agrees to Let C. I. O. Unit Control Moving Of Needed Material

Situation Eased

By the Associated Press

The Allis-Chalmers Manufacturing Co. agreed last night in Milwaukee to meet demands of the striking C. I. O. United Automobile Workers Union as to the procedure for removing from the plant completed equipment "vitally needed" by the War and Navy Departments.

Max W. Babb, president of the company, said that the company agreed "as a temporary expedient" to permit the union to designate what men shall do the removal work.

Shipment of Navy materials will begin this morning and Army materials will begin moving early next week. The strike for a union shop is continuing, however. An estimated $40,000,000 in defense orders is affected.

In the dispute over the removal of the defense equipment, the union had demanded that it have the right to pass upon names of men whom the company proposed to send into the plant to remove the equipment and that a union steward accompany such crews. The company had objected to this procedure.

Announcement of the agreement came after Col. Donald Armstrong, Chicago ordnance district executive officer, had complained that the strike was holding up the entire United States powder manufacturing program and "endangering the safety of the country."

Col. Armstrong had sought the release of "key equipment" and had warned that "the Army cannot sit back and let national defense be sabotaged by failure to deliver this material."

Meanwhile the possibility that about 750,000 class 1 railroad employes, members of 14 standard brotherhoods, might strike for paid vacations arose as George M. Harrison, spokesman for the unions, announced that—barring a last-minute settlement—strike ballots would be mailed to the membership February 15.

Thirty days would be allowed for the voting, however, and that, coupled with the 60-day "cooling off" period provided under the Railroad Mediation Act, would prevent an actual walkout until late spring, provided a strike were called.

At Chicago, 6,500 employes of the International Harvester Co.'s tractor works remained out.

U.S. Being Led Into War Public Doesn't Want, Senators Told

(Secretary Stimson's Letter, Page 7.)

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Staff Writer

The editor of America's most influential Protestant magazine, a famous speed flier, a New York judge and two spokesmen for youth appeared before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee to oppose the lend-lease bill yesterday, and among them charged that the Roosevelt Administration was leading a bewildered, none-too-strong United States into a war which the people do not want.

Charles Clayton Morrison, editor of the Christian Century, said the bill was a blueprint for a dictatorship and equivalent to a declaration of war. He accused President Roosevelt of scaring and confusing the American people, and in the hysteria and confusion committing them to one step after another leading into war.

"Such a war will not be America's war," he said. "It will be the President's war. America has never fought a President's war."

Maj. Al Williams, former Navy and Marine Corps flier, who once held the world's speed record, accused the Roosevelt Administration of "stripping" the Army and Navy of aircraft to help other countries.

"America today is woefully deficient in air power," the flier said. "In fact, American air power is a myth.

"I don't think that there is a single-seat fighter in the United States that is first class, either in armor, gun power or performance."

After Williams concluded, Chairman George read into the record a letter from Secretary of War Stimson which contested the argument of Williams and Col. Charles A. Lindbergh that shipment of warplanes to Britain and her allies was impairing American air power. On the contrary, Stimson told the committee, the foreign orders have brought about a 100 per cent expansion in the aircraft industry that will immeasurably benefit the Army and Navy.

Secretary Stimson said that shipments of United States planes have

13 States Set To Fight Power Yardstick Plan

Western Governors Council Denounces Congressional Proposal

By the United Press

Denver, Feb. 7.—Representatives of 13 Western States voted tonight at a "Governors' council on State rights" unqualified opposition to any proposal for creation of "power yardsticks" similar to the TVA, anywhere west of the Mississippi River.

The Governors and water experts aimed a strongly worded resolution, adopted after day-long debate, at a proposal before Congress for creation of an Arkansas Valley Authority to take over all dams and reservoirs of the White, St. Francis, Arkansas and Red Rivers in eight States involving 308,165 square miles.

The wording, however, put the conference of Western reclamation States on record in opposition to "any and all other bills creating authorities of a similar nature for other river basins."

The resolution condemned the AVA plan as stripping the West of its water without compensation.

Gov. Ralph L. Carr, of Colorado, Republican, who called the conference, was authorized to name a seven-man committee to draft legislation for a three-point alternative proposal approved by the conference. It provided:

1. For legislation to coordinate activities of existing Federal agencies now engaged in constructing and operating projects for the development of water resources.

2. For amendment of the present reclamation act to expand the "area and purpose" of the bureau.

3. For legislation to insure full cooperation between the Federal and State governments in all future water development

Plan to Speed Utility Program Agreed Upon

Machinery to finance a greatly needed expansion of the Nation's electric power facilities for national defense by putting to work the idle funds of commercial banks was agreed on yesterday at a White House conference, it was said by one of the officials who took part.

Others who attended the meeting with President Roosevelt refused to confirm or deny this report. The conferees included: Acting Treasury Secretary Daniel W. Bell, Chairman Leo T. Crowley of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, Chairman Jerome N. Frank of the Securities and Exchange Commission and Commissioners Sumner T. Pike and Edward C. Eicher.

The plan agreed on was said to provide for a change in a proposed rule now being considered by the SEC which would require competitive bidding in the sale to underwriters and others of public utility securities.

Under the agreement reached yesterday, the rule would be relaxed so that commercial banks could buy

Special Broadcast, Two More Benefits Will Aid Blood Bank

Rapidly gaining momentum as St. Valentine's week—theme week of the campaign—approaches, the Children's Hospital blood bank program was expanded yesterday by the scheduling of a special WJSV broadcast and two more American Legion benefits.

In the meantime, ticket sales for the Fraternal Blood Bank Tournament which will be held tomorrow night at the Convention Hall bowling alleys passed the $600 mark.

The WJSV broadcast is set for 10:15 p. m. Thursday. On this program, youngsters who have recovered from serious illnesses or injuries after receiving "bank" transfusions will tell their experiences, and blood donors will describe their feelings on making "deposits" in the novel institution.

$1,300,000,000 Top On Munitions Lease Passes With Consent Of Administration

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

In a surprise Administration compromise, the House yesterday limited to roughly $1,300,000,000 the value of existing Army and Navy defense equipment the President can transfer to Great Britain.

Lend-lease bill managers proposed the limitation as Republicans sought to cut the amount to $500,000,000. The Administration substitute was immediately accepted, and adopted viva voce.

Final action on the aid-England bill went over until today after leaders, caught in a shower of opposition amendments, abandoned plans for a night session.

Party Lines Held

Every opposition effort was battered down. Democrats, rallying from Thursday's lapse, voted almost solidly behind their leaders. Across the aisle, Republicans voted with equal precision for every unsuccessful opposition change.

Today's hottest fight will come on efforts to place an over all "top" on the total amount of defense material to be manufactured for Britain. There were increasing indications the Administration will accept some "ceiling" if it is high enough not to hamstring aid.

Representative Wadsworth (Republican), of New York, first to propose a top limit on the present "blank check" authorization for new materials, suggested $7,000,000,000 over all.

Yesterday's unexpected limitation applies only to ships, tanks, guns, planes and other defense articles the Army and Navy already have on hand or on order for its own use, "procured from funds heretofore appropriated."

It was framed as an answer to repeated Republican charges that the President under the original bill might give away the Navy, if he chose, or a substantial part of it.

Republicans opened efforts to limit this power at the outset of yesterday's session.

Representative Fish (Republican), of New York, ranking minority member of the Foreign Affairs Committee, proposed that "no ships of the United States Navy may be disposed of to belligerent nations except with the approval of Congress."

This was defeated by a teller vote of 183 to 123.

Just before adjournment, Representative Taber, of New York, ranking Republican member of the Appropriations Committee, resumed the attack.

Taber asked that Army and Navy military supplies disposed of in the aid program be limited to $500,000,000.

Bloom Offers Substitute

Chairman Bloom, following conferences with Speaker Rayburn and Democratic Foreign Affairs committeemen, rose with the Administration's substitute proposal and asked Taber to accept it.

The Bloom substitute read:

"The value of defense articles disposed of in any way under authority of this paragraph, and procured from funds heretofore appropriated, shall not exceed 10 per cent of the total amount appropriated for defense articles during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1941."

Rayburn took the floor briefly to explain that he had ordered a compilation of 1941 appropriations and

How Would You Vote On Lease-Lend Bill?

Gallup poll agents queried voters, found out how many favor lease-lend as is, how many favor it with changes, how many are against it, how many don't know. Important figures, these, for you to have in mind when you follow the debate in Congress on the bill. Look for them in Sunday's Post.

Look, too, for the third of the Silsbee articles on military aviation. Pertinent, this one, for it tells about our own air power, tells what we have, what's coming, what we've given England, what the qualities and faults are of each type. Frank and informative—also to be borne in mind when following lease-lend news, especially the testimony of the "experts" on "who will win" and "can we defend ourselves?"

One such expert not only knows what Britain did wrong, but also what Lindbergh meant when he said England couldn't win! Who is the omniscient one? Who else but George Bernard Shaw—represented in Sunday's Post with an article intriguingly entitled "Stalin and Lindbergh." (Could that be an inversion of his "Man and Superman?")

While the experts speculate on what might happen should Hitler win, one man reports what does happen to those who fall into a totalitarian's power. On Sunday's book page look for the review of "Out Of The Night," by Jan Valtin, first a German Communist, then prisoner of the Gestapo, later a Nazi spy, now a refugee. Warning to ladies with fresh permanents: it's guaranteed to take the curl out of your hair.

The plot involves such matters as falling in love with two sisters, love vs. pity, and death-bed marriages. But—surprise!—Love Conquers in the End and They Live Happily Ever After. Well—what's a love story for, anyhow? You'll like this one in Sunday's Post.

Heroes of Science

It isn't as spectacular to be a Government scientist as to be an aviator or explorer and you get fewer medals. But when the headline heroes are forgotten, the discoveries of the quiet men will continue to benefit the Nation. Jerry Kluttz tells, in Sunday's "Federal Diary," of some retiring Bureau of Plant Industry scientists, one of whom made possible the United States fig and date industries, another who made tested seed possible, a third who's enabling America to get rope close to home instead of past the warships of Japan.

Hearts Are Trumps

Valentine parties are the thing for next week, and Martha Ellyn gives lots of delectable recipes in Sunday's food article. Mary Haworth examines a certain midshipman's lack of valentines, and Malvina Lindsay explores some lost loves in every man's and woman's past.

John L. O'Brian Accepts O.P.M. Counsel Post

John Lord O'Brian, nationally known attorney of Buffalo, N. Y., has accepted the position of general counsel of the Office of Production Management, it was announced yesterday.

O'Brian's appointment, which has been rumored for some weeks, brings to one of the OPM's key posts a Republican who has held a New Deal position before, as special counsel for the Tennessee Valley Authority in its constitutional case. Subsequently, however, O'Brian opposed James M. Mead in the New York senatorial race in 1938.

The new post will not be O'Brian's first in a defense program. During the World War he headed the Justice Department's war emergency division and was chairman of his district's draft board of appeals. In the Hoover Administration he became Assistant Attorney General.

Seek to Avert Price Rise

Pending O'Brian's arrival, defense attorneys were working yesterday on drafting details of the purchasing duties of the OPM purchases division.

The division is faced with the problem of aiding Army buyers in spending a requested $175,000,000 appropriation for clothing and equipage. The objective, as explained to a House Appropriations Subcommittee by the division's deputy director, A. J. Browning, is to place orders in such a way as to insure obtaining supplies without risking undue price rises because of the enormous quantities needed.

Browning explained that a rush buying program tends to create bad market conditions and that owing to the practice of providing funds on the basis of the fiscal year, the Quartermaster Corps was unable to avoid piling the Army purchases on top of the peak period of consumer buying.

Pointing out that large private purchasers take advantage of slack periods and at the same time assure themselves of receiving adequate supplies by placing orders from six months to a year ahead of their needs, Browning said that the Army ought to place its orders even further in the future.

Fears "Impossible Situation"

In urging the $175,000,000 "interim" appropriation, Browning said that "if the Army continues to buy its clothing on the present basis, we will be faced with an impossible situation if, within the next year, the strength of the Army should be appreciably increased over the present plan."

Privately, Browning indicated that the OPM purchases division, with experts on its staff familiar with the industries involved, could be of service in advising on the timing of order placement.

He explained that the contemplated expenditures include a $69,000,000 item for woolen cloth, the orders for which, if carefully placed, would enable industry to operate on an even keel, avoiding alternate "feast and famine" periods during which machines would be set up and taken down, only to be set up again.

Early placing of the orders, he told the committee, "will help prevent bottlenecks in production and sharp price increases such as occurred in the fall of 1940."

France Had a 'Feeling' U. S. Would Help, Romains Thinks

AUTHOR AND WIFE—Jules Romains and Mme. Romains as she interpreted for the French author in an interview yesterday

A man given to frequent sad smiles and much eloquent shrugging, Jules Romains, the French author of the extensive "Men of Good Will," sat beside his wife here yesterday and hoped "the world of tomorrow will be in better health."

He did not attempt conversational English, relying on his wife for translation. And through her ready help he suggested that there had been "a feeling, a conviction, an intuition" that should France declare war on Germany, it would be to have the United States on France's side. They had never considered, however, that the United States was bound to such a course, he said.

And from letters received, he has concluded that 90 or even 95 per cent of Frenchmen today are still favorable to the British cause; that Weygand is holding back the French army in Africa from entering the fight against the Italians.

"Surely," he said, "the British will continue to resist."

He could not imagine how they could lose, but he also had difficulty in seeing how they could win.

Politics must play as important a part as arms, he believed.

He thinks a "good new deal" can come to the world after the war through some form of confederation by the democracies. Others would be excluded until they became democracies.

And of literature to be produced by the war—Romains shrugged:

"If the Germans win, there will be no literature at all."

He was a guest at the Whyte Bookshop, 1707 H Street Northwest.

Labor Picture Satisfactory, Hillman Says

By Alfred Friendly
Post Staff Writer

Preliminary analysis by the Defense Commission labor division staff of a Navy Department list of 127 strikes in defense industries reveals a less serious labor situation than the number would suggest, it was learned last night.

At a press conference yesterday, Sidney Hillman, associate director of the Office of Production Management, said he believed the list included several disputes which had not materialized into strikes and several unimportant stoppages which were of only a few hours' duration.

The list compiled by Secretary of Navy Knox and made public Thursday by Senator Walsh (Democrat), of Massachusetts, is now being analyzed by Hillman's staff. The study is expected to show that only a few of the disputes developed into strikes of major proportions.

Hillman Satisfied

Hillman, who denied the existence of "a wave of strikes," said he found the labor situation "very satisfactory" and implied that he saw no need for legislation curbing industrial disputes.

"My position is that the situation so far is satisfactory and there is no need for changes. When a situation is good, why ask for changes? Don't meddle with it," Hillman declared.

Asked about the necessity of legislation setting up a compulsory 30-day "cooling off" period, Hillman said he could bring to light "case after case" in which the present mediation services of the Defense Commission and the Labor Department insisted on and secured 90-day periods of deliberation to forestall strikes.

On Capitol Hill, however, Representative Vinson (Democrat), of Georgia, forecast passage of a bill he introduced requiring the cooling-off period and presentation of disputes in defense industries to a mediation board.

Statistics Cited

"I am going ahead with my bill to prevent stoppage of production of naval defense materials," Vinson said. "I am sure that the House will pass some legislation to slow down strikes."

Hillman presented statistics to show that during 1940 time lost because of strikes was only one-fourth as large as time lost from industrial accidents. Work stoppages accounted for an average loss of less than a quarter a day per year per worker, Hillman said, quoting a Bureau of Labor statistics survey made at his request.

The study showed that the number of man-days idle owing to strikes during the first six months of the defense program was only half as great as in the corresponding period in 1939, and that the number of men involved was 47 per cent less than during the first six months of the defense program when the Nation was at war 24 years ago.

Out of about 300 threatened disputes arising since the beginning of the defense program in which experts from the Defense Commission and Conciliation Service intervened, "only a handful resulted in appreciable stoppages, and all of these were of short duration," Hillman reported.

Dr. Sheehy Will Serve Navy As Chaplain for Emergency

Educator Terms Course Indorsement Of Roosevelt Policy

THE REV. DR. SHEEHY

The Rev. Dr. Maurice S. Sheehy, head of the department of religious education, Catholic University, will report at the Jacksonville Naval Base about March 1 to serve as a chaplain in the Navy for duration of the emergency, he announced yesterday.

Father Sheehy holds the rank of lieutenant commander in the Naval Reserves. He will serve a few weeks at Norfolk before reporting for duty at Jacksonville, Fla.

A strong supporter of the Administration's foreign policy, Father Sheehy was the guest of Cardinal Hinsley in London when hostilities broke out and remained for some time as an unofficial observer.

"The first condition of our thinking should be America's security," Father Sheehy said last night. "Actions speak louder than words. I hope my action in going into service with the Navy may be interpreted as whole-hearted indorsement of President Roosevelt's defense program and all that it implies."

Father Sheehy has served on the Catholic University staff for 14 years. During the last war, he initiated the Knights of Columbus movement at Fort Sheridan, Ill. He was named by President Roosevelt in 1936 as a member of the Board of Visitors of the Naval Academy.

Two years ago, Father Sheehy accompanied Bishop James H. Ryan on a good-will tour of South America arranged by the State Department.

Dr. Sheehy will speak on the subject of "Fence Sitters" for 10 minutes, beginning at 5:40 p. m. today over radio station WJSV. His topic, it was said, will be in connection with aid to Britain.

they approximated $13,000,000,000. Ten per cent of this figure would place a $1,300,000,000 restriction on existing defense articles that could be loaned.

Taber, after studying the substitute, agreed to withdraw his own.

"It is not as low as I want," said the New York Republican, "but I am chiefly anxious that no havoc be played with our Army or Navy, and that this bill doesn't destroy our capacity to defend the United States."

A vote was ordered, and the compromise limitation was approved, Republicans generally joining Democrats in the voice vote for the first and only time yesterday.

Like clockwork, throughout the day, the Democratic majority had voted down opposition efforts to write further restrictions into the bill.

Ban Against Russia Fails

Unsuccessful amendments were:

By Representative Tinkham (Republican), of Massachusetts, to prevent Russia from receiving any lend-lease supplies. Defeated, 185 to 94.

By Representative Mott (Republican), of Oregon, emphasizing Neutrality Act prohibitions on American ships carrying supplies through combat zones. Defeated, 91 to 67.

By Representative Costello (Democrat), of California, providing that Britain pay for arms through transfer of Western Hemisphere possessions as well as strategic materials. Defeated, 150 to 125.

By Representative Hope (Republican), of Kansas, empowering the President to include as part payment for arms aid trade concessions to benefit American Agricultural products. Defeated, 158 to 106.

By Representative Wolcott (Republican), of Michigan, to strike out the phrase "Notwithstanding the provisions of any other law" which now gives the lease-lend authority right-of-way over conflicting statutes. Defeated, 114 to 71.

By Representative Fish, providing that nothing in the bill should affect the eight-hour law, the Wage-hour Act, or any other laws affecting the rights of labor. Defeated, 153 to 98.

Fish said William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, asked him to offer the labor amendment. Fish argued that as now written, powers under the bill would come in conflict and take precedence over statute rights of labor in some cases.

Democrats Sarcastic

Majority Leader McCormack took the floor to deny this, and to urge members to defeat the amendment because it was unnecessary. This vote also followed party lines, Democrats twitting many Republican opponents of labor legislation as Republicans rose in a body to vote "for labor's rights."

Aside from the surprise restriction on the amount of existing defense equipment the President can transfer, only one other committee amendment was voted on in the long day's stretch.

Offered by Chairman Bloom, it declared that nothing in the act authorized "entry of any American vessel into a combat area in violation of section 3 of the Neutrality Act of 1939." This was swiftly adopted.

Thursday the House adopted a similar committee change specifying that nothing in the act authorized "convoying vessels by naval vessels of the United States."

Currie Is Received By Chiang Kai-Shek

Chungking, China, Feb. 7 (AP).—Laughlin Currie, administrative assistant to President Roosevelt assigned to a special mission in China, was received today by Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek at his official residence.

With Currie were Emile Destres, senior economist of the Federal Reserve Board, and Nelson T. Johnson, United States Ambassador to China.

Winant Flies Here, Discusses London Duties

Like a Mr. Smith come to Washington, John G. Winant with a friendly smile and few words yesterday began a tour of diplomatic duties that will carry him before the end of the month to London as Ambassador.

Diffident despite the years he has spent in Washington serving the New Deal, Winant arrived here by plane yesterday and immediately went into conference with President Roosevelt.

While they were closeted together the Senate Foreign Relations Committee approved the three-time Republican Governor of New Hampshire to represent his country at the Court of St. James's. The full Senate still has to give its expected confirmation to the nomination.

After spending more than an hour with Mr. Roosevelt, Winant emerged to face the Capital press corps.

Shifting his long, Lincolnesque frame from one foot to another, ruminatively rubbing his chin, the New Hampshire Yankee said he would probably leave for King George VI's court sometime after the end of the month.

Awaits Hopkins' Return

He will delay his departure until Harry L. Hopkins, the President's special emissary, return from Britain, Winant said.

Formerly director of the International Labor Office, an affiliate of the League of Nations, Winant spoke in carefully chosen words of his hopes for a postwar world.

When a reporter asked if he favored the "union now" plan advocated by Clarence Streit, Winant replied:

"I think some day we will have to reach out further than just the two English-speaking countries. Of course, we will have to collaborate with Britain on a wider scale. But I do not mean that I advocate a plan of union at the present time."

Winant wore a plain black suit which needed pressing. When he arrived at the White House the collar of his overcoat was turned up against the rain, a well-worn hat was pulled down almost over shaggy eyebrows.

Knows England Well

He spoke of the England he knows well, the England he first visited before the World War to study social insurance under Lloyd George, the England he last saw in July, gripped by a new war.

"There are social changes taking place in England, certainly," he said. "I would call it a leveling process."

His will be a lone mission. Though Winant is married and has three children, he said he would not be accompanied by any member of his family when he goes to England. He planned to make the trip by air.

What the President and Winant discussed was not disclosed. While they talked, the President picked up the telephone and spoke to Hopkins in London.

Schedules Conferences

He is scheduling conferences with Secretary of State Hull and other State Department officials, with Lord Halifax, the British Ambassador, and he said he hoped to see Wendell Willkie when the former Republican Presidential candidate returns from Europe.

Winant's immediate plans were to leave last night for a weekend trip and speech in New York, to return to Washington next week for more conference, and then to visit Montreal to wind up his affairs at the I. L. O. headquarters which are located there.

Softspoken and modest, he said he had shaken hands with most of the members of the British cabinet.

"Would you say that some of them are your personal friends?" a reporter asked.

"I would rather that they say that," Winant replied.

Bengasi Taken in British Pincers Movement as Demoralized Italians Offer Little Resistance

with heavy losses to the enemy. After 60 of their tanks became battle casualties the enemy finally ceased fighting."

In addition to the prisoners, the British said, quantities of war material of all descriptions also were captured.

Bengasi, vital port city at the crossroads between Eastern and Central Libya, was taken by one column of British troops Thursday, and presumably the other British column took the remainder of the Italian prisoners yesterday.

The identity of the captured Italian army commander was not given in the special communique. Marshal Graziani had been reported in Bengasi before the final assault was made.

Some Escape Net

Some of the Italian garrison of 25,000 were believed to have escaped the British net by taking to boats in Bengasi's expensively improved harbor, which will accommodate big British cruisers and provide a base to support lengthened British ground lines.

How many prisoners were in British hands could not be estimated last night. Counting was under way.

British military sources said, too, that of the original garrison many already had been evacuated before the encirclement of Bengasi was completed, some perhaps by sea. The encirclement is roughly 500 miles from the base from which the British started their great desert offensive on December 8, the Egyptian railhead of Matruh.

When the trap was sprung, the Italians offered virtually no resistance in Bengasi itself, it was said here, although they fired huge dumps of ammunition and stores.

The city—Berenice to the ancients, who had thus named it for an Egyptian princess they considered more beautiful even than Cleopatra—was one of the gems of the Italian empire.

Biggest Base Yet Taken

More than that, it was the biggest base yet taken in the long British thrust to the west, with a normal population of more than 50,000; its capture gave the British control of the whole of eastern Libya but also as an advanced pointed out it can be used not only against the Italians remaining in Libya, but also as an advanced striking base to attack the German dive-bomber nests in Sicily.

Between Bengasi and Tripoli—400 airline miles to the west—there are only a few inconsequential coastal towns and the British expect Italian Marshal Rodolfo Graziani to fall back to that ancient city with whatever men can survive to make his next and, perhaps, last stand.

The earlier communique disclosing the fall of Bengasi likewise reported that preparations for the big British offensive on Cheren, in Eritrea far to the south, were "developing satisfactorily."

In Eritrea, it was stated, 3,500 Italian prisoners already had been taken "with many more coming in," and the field of action was "littered" with abandoned Italian war materials.

In Italian Ethiopia, the British advance eastward along the Gondar Road was officially reported continuing and it was said that in that sector prisoners had been captured.

On the fourth African front, in Italian Somaliland, some 2,000 miles from Libya, British patrols were said to be "successfully enlarging the area of their penetration."

The developing attack on Cheren, the most important maneuver in all the East African area, is intended to open the way for the seizure of the Eritrean capital of Asmara and thus, perhaps, to the fall of the whole colony to British arms.

Bengasi's capture was described by the British command as a "brilliant" operation — an expression not used by it before in all the African campaign.

British armored forces, said the high command, cut to the south of the town and straddled and dominated the Italian line leading to the southward.

Australian troops advancing from Derna struck simultaneously and gave the fleeing Fascists "no respite."

Then, "demoralized and outmaneuvered," as the British put it, the Italians could not put into effect whatever plans they had for the defense of Bengasi.

Aloft, as in the successful storming of Bardia and Tobruk and Derna, the Royal Air Force claimed unquestioned command.

British bombers lifted the curtain for the final assault on Bengasi by violent bombardments of the city and its supporting airdromes, damaging "a number of Fascist bombers, and meeting—said an R. A. F. communique—not a single Italian fighter over Bengasi itself.

This was the position last night at the end of a 61-day British offensive which began within Egypt against Italian invaders who had penetrated there as far as 70 miles:

The Italians driven back 350 miles into Libya; two provincial capitals—Derna and now Bengasi—in British hands; Italian casualties in killed and captured not officially tabulated, but running far ahead of 100,000, according to British account; the Italians in such position that a counter-attack would have to be launched on a single road along the Gulf of Sidra—a road commanded by British battleships and British bombers.

Royal Academy Plans Yearly Show as Usual

London, Feb. 7.—War or no war, the Royal Academy will hold its annual show this year from May 5 to August 9 at Burlington House, as they have done every year since 1789.

Many artists from occupied areas in France, now living in England, are expected to submit works which will to some extent counteract the shortage of native artists devoting their time to the fighting forces or air-raid-precautions duties.

Quotas Listed For District Draft Boards

Selective Service officials yesterday announced the quota to be furnished by each of Washington's 25 local boards to make up the record-breaking March call of 1,100.

While five local areas were ordered to furnish 100 selectees, in six others no recruits were called for.

Officials explained that only white trainees are to be sworn in in the March induction and colored men predominate in the order numbers next in line for call in the six boards in questions. Accordingly, it would be necessary to skip down the list to call white registrants, a procedure contrary to the theory of selective service.

However, the boards passed over for the March call will be called upon for the majority of soldiers in forthcoming inductions, when heavy requisitions of colored men are ordered into service.

In the meantime, physical examinations will continue in the sequence of order numbers for both white and colored registrants to provide a reservoir against the future calls.

To provide the required 1,100 for swearing in at Baltimore's Fifth Regiment Armory March 3 to 10, inclusive, about 3,000 men will be examined physically in hospitals February 13, 17, 20, and 27.

The quota breakdown by local boards follows:

Board No. 1, 45; No. 2, 100; No. 3, 50; No. 4, 100; No. 5, 100; No. 6, 50; No. 7, 75; No. 8, 47; No. 9, 50; No. 10, 0; No. 11, 7; No. 12, 0; No. 13, 5; No. 14, 50; No. 15, 2; No. 16, 50; No. 17, 44; No. 18, 50; No. 19, 0; No. 20, 100; No. 21, 0; No. 22, 75; No. 23, 0; No. 24, 100, and No. 25, 0.

Roosevelt Orders Step for Objectors

Copyright by New York Times

President Roosevelt yesterday issued an Executive order authorizing the director of Selective Service to designate what work of national importance can be given to drafted men conscientiously opposed to noncombatant, as well as combatant, service and to assign men to such work.

The President acted under the terms of the Selective Servic Act in giving the following authorization:

"1. The director of Selective Service is authorized to establish, designate or determine work of national importance under civilian direction to which may be assigned persons found to be conscientiously opposed to participation in combatant and noncombatant training and service in the land or naval forces of the United States.

"2. The director shall make the necessary assignments to such work, shall determine the agencies, organizations or individuals that may provide civilian direction thereof, and shall have general supervision and control over such work."

A program for such civilian training will go into operation soon under direction of religious organizations which will pay practically the entire cost of operating civilian "camps" it was said at Selective Service headquarters. An official of the National Service Board for Religious Objectors said that options are held on seven camps and that it will cost some $3,000,000 annually to operate them.

The Federal draft organization, however, will supervise this work to see that a high standard is maintained and that men do work equivalent to the training activities of Army draftees.

Moslems Seen Taking Britain Side in Africa

Copyright by New York Times

Vichy, Feb. 7.—There is every reason to believe that the Moslem world has definitely sided with Britain, at least, morally. When the extent of Moslem influence in North Africa is considered this development has untold possibilities. Official circles naturally will not commit themselves, but private advices reaching here by devious routes from various African centers sufficiently reveal the trend.

It may serve as background for such developments as the following:

First, an intimation from Rome that Italy does not consider she is called upon to interfere in French internal affairs (the manifest allusion is to Pierre Laval's return to office in the Vichy cabinet); consequently she bases her policy strictly on the terms of the armistice.

Second, the broadcast from Algiers by Gen. Maxime Weygand declaring that there can be no question of ceding a base at Bizerte to the Axis.

Third, the rapid advance of the British forces in Cyrenaica climaxed today by the capture of Bengasi.

Those familiar with conditions in North Africa point out that in all conceptions of that "Eurafrica" which would be one of the fruits of "collaboration" by continental Europe, perhaps the most important factor was not taken into consideration—the Moslems. In Morocco, in Algeria, in Tunisia, in Libya, in Egypt, they cannot be ignored; their racial and religious sympathies with the peoples inhabiting the Arabian peninsula are common knowledge. Turkey also has a place in the picture. Morocco, Algeria and Tunisia have manifested their loyalty to France throughout the war; Egypt has thrown in her lot with Britain as have also various Arab races on the eastern side of the Suez Canal.

There remains Italian North Africa—Libya. It is a matter of history that the conquest of Libya was marked by stern repression of Moslem tribes which were gradually driven south into the desert where, nevertheless, they retained their organization and remained a menace. Their active participation in hostilities would introduce a serious complication.

It is being recalled that the Second Reich did not belittle Moslem influence and that Kaiser Wilhelm was at pains to cultivate Moslem amity. It is being recalled also that Benito Mussolini a few years before the war went to Libya and there proclaimed himself the protector of Islam. It would seem that these efforts were in vain. However that may be, France today retains the dominant Moslem empire in Africa.

Reich Paying 34% of Income In War Taxes

By Alvin J. Steinkopf,
Associated Press Staff Writer

Berlin, Feb. 7.—Germans are paying an annual wartime tax bill of some 34,000,000,000 marks $13,600,000,000) out of a hundred-billion mark ($40,000,000,000) national income, E. W. Schmidt, director of the Deutsche Bank, reported today.

Schmidt told foreign correspondents that after the payment of the costs of civil administration, there was about 20,000,000,000 marks ($8,000,000,000) a year available for war finance.

Germany's system of "silent financing"—silent, he explained, because of the great absence of great loan drives or spectacular campaigns for contributions—has obviated the danger of inflation following great war expenditures, Schmidt added.

Control Is Thorough

His explanation indicated inflation also had been eliminated because of Germany's thoroughgoing control of earnings, savings and investments of her citizens.

The people's income, he asserted, has been so accurately apportioned among civil needs, civil government costs and war finance that no one account was permitted to get out of hand or upset the carefully adjusted plan to meet every need which financial strategists have foreseen.

Germany's national debt was estimated at 79,000,000,000 marks ($31,600,000,000), an increase of 45,000,000,000 marks ($18,000,000,000) since the war's start. This was covered by various types of loans of surprisingly low interest, Schmidt said, averaging about 2½ per cent.

Says Loans Come Easy

Tax income is inadequate to finance all Germany's war needs and loans are essential, the banker explained. He added, however, that the Reich's management of its economy makes these loans come easily.

In fact, there is no place else for surplus money to go except into government obligations.

Rationing, inability to make certain industrial replacements because of lack of materials, and increased wages have placed millions of additional marks in the pockets of Germans which they cannot spend.

Some must go out because of increased taxes, the rest to savings banks which promptly and "silently" invest in government securities.

Since the end of 1937, he said, the note circulation has increased by only about 2,200,000,000 marks, a gain which he attributed not to any inflationary trend, but to additional currency needs of territories recently annexed.

Nazis Put Briton to Death As Spy—the First in This War

Copyright by New York Times

Berlin, Feb. 7.—Percy William Olaf De Wet, a 28-year-old Englishman, has been sentenced to death by the people's tribunal in Germany after a two-day secret trial for espionage. De Wet is the first British spy to be reported caught by the Germans on Reich soil since the war began.

Details of the trial were not allowed to be revealed, according to two correspondents of the Voelkischer Beobachter who were present. A brief resume of De Wet's life is given in tomorrow's issue of that National Socialist organ under a January dateline.

The Englishman was accused of being in the employ of the French "Deuxieme Bureau." At the time of his capture he was in the company of a female dancer who apparently was his accomplice, but who committed suicide before she could be brought to trial.

De Wet had a checkered career, according to the Voelkischer Beobachter. He studied, it was reported, to be a British officer, but failed his final examination purposely because he did not wish to join the infantry. Shortly thereafter, it is said, he became a lieutenant in the Royal Air Force, from which he soon resigned.

For nine months he flew for the Negus of Ethiopia and after having his services declined by Gen. Franco, fought for the Loyalists for three months. Finally he went to Prague where he endeavored to join the Czech air force. After the dissolution of Czecho-Slovakia, it is said, he began activities for the enemy, for which he has been executed.

According to the Voelkischer Beobachter De Wet was a member of the De Wet family of Boer War fame. He appears to have been an interesting fellow, to whom French was a second mother tongue and who, in addition to having been a painter, wrote and published two books, "The Paper Crucifix" and "The Patrol Ended."

After the peoples tribunal, composed of three high members of the National Socialist party and the armed forces, had condemned him to death, De Wet is reported to have thanked it for the fairness of his trial and to have bowed to his judges.

the utility bonds without going through the formalities of sealed bids.

The way the rule is now worded, commercial banks could buy these securities without competitive bidding only in the case of sale of an unsecured bond or note of a maturity of less than ten years.

The agreement sketched at the White House would allow the commercial banks, whose coffers hold billions in idle funds, to buy secured bonds or notes with maturities longer than ten years without competitive bidding.

The change was asked at the suggestion of commercial banks, it was said.

The White House conference was called shortly after completion of hearings on the proposed competitive-bidding rule, which has drawn criticism from all but a small minority of the country's investment bankers.

The conferees were motivated, it was explained by a desire to make it easier for public utilities to tap the vast funds of commercial banks.

Those at the White House meeting felt that a large-scale expansion of electric power facilities was long overdue, it was said. National defense exigencies were believed to make the need for this expansion even more urgent.

The conferees had in mind recent figures on public utility financing which show that the industry sold less securities in 1940 than in any year since 1937.

A compilation shows that in 1935 public utilities issued securities totaling $1,048,686,400, in 1936 they issued $1,413,151,551 in 1937 the total was $664,304,635; $983,502,995 in 1938, $889,931,600 in 1939 and $881,247,251 in 1940.

The second agreement rejected force as a means of settling differences that may arise between the two countries, and the third related to trade promotion. Dr. Alfredo Solf y Muro, Peru's premier and foreign minister, and Manuel Bianchi, Chilean foreign minister, signed the agreements.

U. S. Embassy In Rome Put Under Guard

By Herbert L. Matthews
Copyright by New York Times

Rome, Feb. 7.—The American Embassy was guarded all day today by hundreds of Italian soldiers, while students demonstrated for the second straight day against "the plutocracies" in other parts of Rome. There has been nothing so potentially ominous here since the series of demonstrations which preceded Italy's entry into the war. But it must be stated immediately that, so far, there has been nothing specifically aimed against Americans or the American Embassy.

What alarms the American colony in Rome is that the anti-British demonstrations were made in just this way. There is growing resentment against the anti-Italian attitude of the American press and the fact that it appears Congress will pass the aid-to-Britain bill.

Both yesterday and today masses of students demonstrated in the usual orderly, systematic style against the plutocraciec in general, and the alleged falseties of British propaganda in particular. On neither day did they approach anywhere near the American Embassy.

The soldiers were in war kit, with rifles and helmets, and they had to stay on duty all through the day.

Press Hails Lindbergh

Rome, Feb. 7 (AP).—Criticism of President Roosevelt's aid to Britain program, particularly that by Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, took precedence in Italian newspapers today over everything except news of the fighting in Africa.

"One should not believe public opinion in the United States is unanimous in backing Great Britain," the official Rome radio said.

Il Piccolo devoted a column to praise of Lindbergh. Citing his doubt that Britain can win the war, it said "what counts is that intelligence and heroism in every part of the world believes in our victory."

Nazis Well Impressed

Berlin, Feb. 7 (AP).—Authorized German sources asserted today that Col. Charles A. Lindbergh's testimony before a United States Senate committee yesterday speaks for itself "and we have nothing to add except to state that the clarity, courage and wisdom with which he expressed himself are truly impressive."

R.A.F. Centers New Attacks On Boulogne

By Joseph S. Evans, jr.
Copyright by New York Tribune Inc.

London, Feb. 7.—R. A. F. bombers roared across the Strait of Dover in waves tonight for the third time this week to attack invasion ports along the German-occupied French coast.

The raid appeared to be concentrated on the Boulogne area, which was also the center of last night's attacks by the R. A. F. It was watched by thousands of Britons who lined the Kent coast and to whom the progress of the raid was plainly visible.

Squadrons of British bombers, with fighter escorts, roared over Kent southward just before 9 o'clock, and shortly thereafter great flashes of flames lit the sky over the enemy occupied coast. Heavy explosions were audible to the watchers and star shells, tracer bullets and "flaming onions" were seen as a terrific barrage of antiaircraft fire wes sent heavenwards by the Germans.

Blasts Shake Kent Coast

When the raid had lasted an hour, two vivid sheets of orange flame eclipsing the previous display, shot up from a point to the east of Boulogne proper, where several parachute flares had been dropped. Separated by about a minute, these flashes were accompanied by violent explosions which rattled doors and windows of houses on the Kent coast. A moment later a widespread red glow lit by flasnes of yellow was reflected on the clouds.

Following this there was a brief lull in gunfire, but as new relays of bombers appeared over the area guns went into action again. It was the sixty-ninth time the British bombers have raided Boulogne.

Up to a late hour last night there had been no reports of raiders over any part of Britain. London was again raid-free for the fifteenth night out of the last 19.

Thursday night R. A. F. bombers also attacked enemy-occupied territory, despite bad weather, pounding ports along the French coast, including Boulogne, Dunkerque, Dieppe, Calais and Fecamp.

One Plane Fails to Return

The air ministry announced that one plane had failed to return to its base. It was learned yesterday from headquarters of the Czecho-Slovak air force here that a Czecho-Slovak fighter squadron attacked St. Omer, in northern France, on Wednesday in cooperation with the R. A. F. It was also disclosed that six Czecho-Slovakian fighter planes raided Boulogne last Sunday.

A town on the northeast coast of Scotland was the target of an attack shortly before noon today by a lone German plane which dropped several bombs, one of which exploded near a huge gas tank, but failed to damage the structure before he was driven off by anti-aircraft fire. The raider dived low over a street and raked it with machine-gun fire, injuring several persons.

An admiralty communique tonight said that a Dornier twin-engined bomber which attempted to attack a convoy was reported shot down by the destroyer Vanity. A direct hit was scored on the enemy plane, which crashed into the sea. There were no survivors. No damage or casualties were suffered by the convoy or the Vanity, which carried a crew of 134, the report added.

Nazis Mine British Ports

Berlin, Feb. 7 (U.P.).—The German air force yesterday carried out armed reconnaissance flights over the British coastal area, during which British harbors were mined and German bombers made "nuisance attacks" against military objectives on the island of Malta, in the Mediterranean, today's high command communique said.

The communique said the enemy last night attempted to fly into occupied territory on the Channel coast, but that only small fires were started in a coastal city as a result of incendiary bombs. One British plane was reported shot down.

A German submarine sank two armed merchantment totaling 12,000 tons, the high command said, and on the British east coast a German speedboat sank a British coastal vessel of undisclosed tonnage.

2 Burma Road Bridges Wrecked, Japanese Say

Hongkong, Feb. 8 (Saturday) (AP).—The Japanese reported early today that both the old and new "Kungkuo" bridges over the Mekong River on the Burma Road were "destroyed beyond repair for a while" yesterday by large formations of Japanese naval planes.

Huge British Guns Hurl Death At Nazis Across Channel

By Drew Middleton,
Associated Press Staff Writer

With the British Home Forces in the Field, Feb. 7.—British long-range guns are pounding the German-held French port of Calais from several positions in the girdle of steel and concrete that encompasses Britain.

For more than a month the crouching monsters have talked across the Channel, tossing tons of high explosive and steel into that "invasion port" and surviving counterfire of Nazi railway batteries in that vicinity.

Everywhere I went in a two-day tour of the area the soldiery, from brigadiers to buck privates, had the same desire. It was best expressed by one trooper who said: "I hope old Jerry will have a go at it—we will brown his hide for him."

I counted many field guns—light, medium and heavy—in a stretch. Farther along heavy and light machine guns, plus mortars and grenadier points, commanded the beach.

Barbed wire and concrete blocks dot every available landing place and the heights above can be swept with concentrated artillery fire.

"We've got so much stuff coming through now it embarrasses us," a colonel of artillery declared. "We don't know where to put it."

Here's what one stretch of beach—in happier times the playground for wealthy Londoners—looks like:

Flimsy beach bungalows stand forlorn and empty. Windows are broken and shutters flap in the fierce wind.

Hotel Fortified

Walking between them and the wire on the beach you glance into the dining room of a once-fashionable hotel and encounter the cold gray muzzle of a Vickers machine gun. A children's sandbox holds thousands of rounds of Bren ammunition. A soldier lies flat on the floor of a sandbagged sun porch, sweeping the restless sea with field glasses.

Sentries with leather jerkins over their battle dress grinned and pointed over the Channel. The haze had lifted and the coast of France was visible. It seemed close enough to touch. You could see snow on the hills between Boulogne and Calais and farther south the outlines of Boulogne.

"There they are," said the sentry.

Back where the big guns lay, the wind swept eddies of snow around the cannon. The crews, speculating on when they'd fire again, said, "It must be a bloody big surprise to Jerry to have one of these things popping at him."

It's comfortable to be pitching and not catching for once. The whole land seems to leap with the concussion which hits you like a flying tackle. Then you hear, fading in the distance, the whack, whack, whack of the shell and sometimes, when the wind is right, the faint boom of an explosion.

This particular coastal town looks like all war-torn towns you ever saw in books or the movies. A handful of civilians breaks the monotony of khaki and blue.

Snow blew through holes and danced in rooms open and naked to the world. But a quarter-mile away a movie house was showing "Strike Up the Band." Soldiers, sailors and airmen back from patrols that never cease were crowding in.

As I left the town there was Judy Garland dancing on a poster ripped by machine-gun bullets.

Few shops still are open. But mess sergeants have replaced housewives. And the streets are very quiet. There are no children about. The footfall of the sentry rings as loudly as ever it did in dead cities of France and Belgium last spring.

Wheeler Asks U.S. to Uncover Nazi Support

By the Associated Press

Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, said yesterday that if President Roosevelt "is so anxious to find out who is aiding Germany" in this country he should support a projected Senate investigation of Germany's holdings in American defense industries.

Wheeler, opponent of the Administration's British aid bill, has had several exchanges with Mr. Roosevelt recently. When he said this week that the United States was sending 85 per cent of its aircraft production to Britain, the President declared that the head of the German Reich must be gratified to receive such information.

The Montana Senator recalled in a statement yesterday that he had obtained Senate approval last year of an investigation into German patent holdings in this country, her interests in American defense industries and the military benefits she had received from the United States.

"In order to carry out the investigation funds were necessary," Wheeler continued. "Senator Truman (Democrat), of Missouri, asked the Senate to appropriate the sum of $100,000.

"That proposal was held up in the Audit and Control Committee, the chairman of which is Senator Byrnes, of South Carolina, close personal friend of the President and the man most spoken of as a probable appointee to the Supreme Court.

"If the President is so anxious about finding out who is aiding Germany I suggest that he might urge his friends on the Audit Committee to approve the appropriation of $100,000."

Women Launch Nation-Wide Religious Move

The beginning of an expected Nation-wide movement, in which persons would spend one hour each Thursday night in "trying to get God's viewpoint" on present problems, was announced yesterday at a women's mass meeting of the National Christian Mission.

Approximately 2,200 packed the main auditorium of Calvary Baptist Church and overflowed into two adjoining rooms to hear Miss Muriel Lester, of London, tell how the movement started with a few hundred women on Thursday at a Christian life forum.

"Every Thursday night from 11 to 12, to the end of the war, persons who join in the movement will take part in this spiritual discipline. By next week, there will be a few thousand. And someone has asked, 'Why not tell the ambassadors?'" Miss Lester said, indicating that the movement would be called to the attention of officials as well as citizens.

How Movement Started

Describing the start of the movement, Miss Lester said that "something happened" at McKendree Methodist Church Thursday morning at the women's forum. When she mentioned the need of some such discipline, Mrs. Warren Bowman, wife of the pastor of Washington City Church of the Brethren, suggested that a start be made, and, by rising, the women present signified their intention to begin the plan last Thursday night.

Overnight the idea grew, until Miss Lester and others visualized it as becoming a national movement. "And it may spread beyond the confines of this country," she said yesterday.

The women's mass meeting yesterday, climaxing the series of six simultaneous forums in various churches daily, brought a crowd which started coming two hours before the 10 a. m. starting hour. The janitor said women seeking front seats were there at 8 a. m.

The main auditorium, which holds 1,300, filled rapidly. The overflow spilled into a smaller auditorium with 800 capacity. Since the amplification system was not working satisfactorily, speakers alternated between these two rooms. Approximately 100 other persons gathered in a third room to listen in.

Noted Missionary Speaks

Dr. E. Stanley Jones, famous missionary to India, spoke at the meeting on "What Part Women Can Play in the Reconstruction of the World."

"Women largely represent the cooperative spirit and men the competitive spirit—and the future of the world is in the hands of cooperation," Dr. Jones said.

In the world today, "all the answers are going in one direction—toward greater cooperation," he pointed out.

Fascism, he said, enlarges the area of cooperation, but stops short within the area of the state. Naziism also calls for cooperation, but stops within the limit of the race. Communism likewise stops short—within the area of the class, he pointed out. "The difficulty is that each stops short," he declared.

Referring to the statue, the Christ of the Andes, on the boundary between Chile and Argentina, Dr. Jones challenged women to "build a Christ of peace" on boundary lines between nations, lines of racial tensions and of class—as well as along the "divided lines in individual hearts."

Explains the "Christian Order"

He pointed out that the "Christian order" is founded on the fact that "the world is a family and God is the Father, and in the family there is cooperation.

"That blinding vision is not yet ready to be adopted by the world. But we've go to accept it to survive. And it's Christians who hold the answer," Dr. Jones said.

In the future cooperative world order, he said, the competitive principle would not be removed altogether, but would be harnessed to constructive ends. The competition would be to see "who could give the most to the common good," he said. "People who work for a cause work ten times as much as those who work for money," he added.

Pastor Named To Be Adviser On Cinema

Dr. Norman Vincent Peale, pastor of the Marble Collegiate Church of New York and member of the National Christian Mission team, yesterday was selected to represent the Protestant churches as adviser on the filming of Warner Brothers' "One Foot in Heaven."

DR. PEALE

Among the current best-sellers, the book was written by Hartzell Spence, a newspaper man, and tells the story of his Iowa preacher-father's life. The action of the Protestant committee will mark the first attempt at such collaboration on a major film.

Dr. Peale was notified of his selection at a meeting of the committee named by the Christian Herald to assist in the collaboration. The committee met yesterday afternoon at the home of the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Episcopal Bishop of Washington, at the Cathedral Close.

Its members include Bishop Freeman; Methodist Bishop Charles Wesley Flint of Syracuse, N. Y.; Dr. Daniel L. Poling, editor of the Christian Herald; Dr. F. H. Knubel, president of the United Lutheran Church in America; Dr. Edgar De Witt Jones, pastor of the Christian Church of Detroit, and Dr. Charles E. Kerr, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Tulsa, Okla.

Mitchell Rawson, publicity man for Warner Brothers, said at yesterday's meeting that Raymond Massey was being considered for the lead, and had been interested in the role. Another possibility was Walter Huston.

Yesterday's conference was result of correspondence between Warner and Dr. Poling, in which the former pointed out that the book was being produced for its strong human appeal and dramatic value, and that "this unforgettable presentation of the life and character of a faithful, God-fearing, altogether lovable Christian minister, written by his son, will do a great deal of good in our country, especially in this critical day and age."

Dr. Peale, being given a sabbatical leave by his congregation for his assignment, will leave for Hollywood after Easter.

sively but not ungently by counsel.

He was made to define bacteriology, pathology and other medical terms. He was told to make his answers complete, yet brief. He was called upon to translate the slang expression "under wraps" so that the jury could not mistake his meaning.

When the day's interrogation and cross-examination was over, the indomitable little surgeon was as fresh as anyone in the courtroom, ready to return to the stand Monday morning for further questioning by the defense.

Objection Sustained

When Prosecutor Lewin asked Dr. Cabot if it were true that group medicine is "a new type of social philosophy that began in 1933," the answer was no.

Leahy promptly objected, and was sustained.

"Are you a member of the American Medical Association?" the witness was asked.

"Oh, yes," he replied through lips puckered in surprise. Dr. Morris Fishbein, editor of the A. M. A. Journal and one of the 20 defendants, smiled. A little later it was a big Fishbein grin when Dr. Cabot described the weekly Journal as "undoubtedly the most important medical journal in the world today."

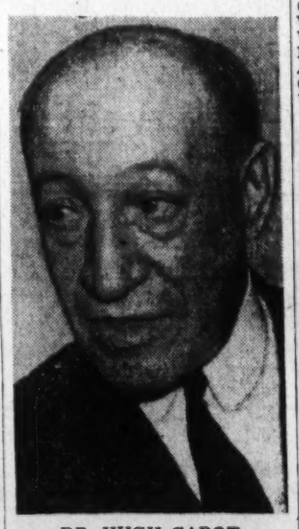
Tells of Visiting Clinic

Asked by Lewin if there is any ethical objection to a doctor's working on salary, the witness replied emphatically in the negative. (G. H. A. staff physicians are employed on such a basis.)

Dr. Cabot told of visiting the G. H. A. clinic in the 1300 block of I Street early in its career—it was launched November 1, 1937—at the invitation of officials and finding everything shipshape: Doctors doing their work right, no overcrowding, laboratories operated efficiently.

Many of Leahy's objections came when Lewin sought to get Dr. Cabot to comment on the A. M. A.'s "attitude" toward group practice schemes in the various States.

Under cross-examination, Leahy brought out from the witness that G. H. A. is different from the famous Mayo Clinic in that the latter does not solicit patients by groups.



DR. HUGH CABOT, noted surgeon, occupied the stand all day at the "doctors' trial" yesterday. He told the court he thought the Group Health Association principle quite sound righteous cooperation. The kingdom of the animal is a feud, the Kingdom of God is a family."

While he occupied that pulpit, the Rev. Philip Lee and the Rev. Edwin Espey, the latter general secretary of the student volunteer movement for foreign missions, were addressing an overflow crowd of 500 in the Luther Place edifice.

Earlier, Mr. and Mrs. Lee went to Sibley Hospital, where they sang to and addressed an audience of nurses in Rust Hall.

Another large audience packed Emory Methodist Church for the final area mass meeting there last night and heard Miss Muriel Lester, the Jane Addams of London, declare:

"We have all contributed to the present agony of the world, by our personal slackness, our sins and our callousness. Something had to snap. There was too much tension. If it had not been Hitler, it would have been someone else. If it had not happened in Germany, it would have happened in some other country, perhaps in Britain, perhaps in the United States of America."

Young People's Parley

Hundreds of other young people will return to Luther Place today for the young people's conference, from 9 a. m. to 4 p. m. Speakers will include Dr. George H. Eaton, of Lynchburg, Va., and the Rev. E. H. Bonsall, director of young people's work for the Pennsylvania State council of education. Miss Lester will address another mass meeting at National City Church tonight at 8.

"The sorry situation" of the world today has come "not by the sin of one man alone, enormous though his culpability is, but as the aggregate resultant of all our sins—of pride, acquisitiveness, exclusiveness, inertia, prejudice, presumption and all uncharitableness," Dr. Arthur L. Kinsolving, of Princeton, N. J., said at the downtown meeting at Epiphany Church yesterday.

He said it was "a hopeful gain" that a mature recognition of this fact has come.

The sin of human nature, he said, does not consist essentially "in our weakness but in our pretense that we are not weak. The very mystery of iniquity is found not in our self-centeredness but in our refusal to recognize that we are self-centered and that we need redemption from on high.

"Religion is not the presumption that we are better than others," Dr. Kinsolving said. "It is the confession that in our own struggle we are inadequate. Why were the saints saints? Not because they were more fortunately endowed with strong characters than others, but because they knew their need and by receiving charitableness from the Lord again and again, they became charitable."

Earlier in the day, speaking at Western High School, Dr. Kinsolving said: "Was there ever a time when man and civilizations were more seriously in search of precisely what the Christian religion has to offer? The problem lies in the stubbornness and continuation of our distrust that God knows what is best for us.

"We must make decisions. When we drift, we invariably drift downstream. It is important to recognize that we must choose. The late Marquess of Lothian reminded us that Dante reserved the lowest rung in Hell for those who are neither for God nor against Him but only for themselves."

Wrecked Army Plane Had Lost Tail Assembly

Lovelock, Nev. Feb. 7 (AP).—The Army flying fortress which crashed yesterday, killing the eight members of the crew, had brushed off most of its tail assembly against a foothill peak a mile and a half from where it finally smashed into a desert mountain and exploded, it was revealed tonight.

This discovery was reported by Lieut. Col. B. T. Tooker and Constable Wallace Reed, of Lovelock.

Army authorities refused to say whether they were convinced the smashed tail assembly was the only cause of the wreck, nor would they comment on why the plane was flying so low as to hit the peak, which is less than 1,000 feet above the desert floor.

The findings substantiated testimony today before a coroner's jury by several CCC youths and a railroad section worker that they saw "a couple of pieces" tear loose from the plane several seconds before it crashed.

prospect that there will be, at least, a show of his bringing some tangible proof of the favor he is supposed to find in the eyes of the occupying authority. This would most likely be the prospect of some impending improvement in the relations between the two zones of France which would contribute toward increase of supplies to the capital.

During Laval's absence from Vichy conditions have become worse to a point where inhabitants have been enduring severe privations.

Laval Expected To Be Dictator

By Ralph E. Heinzen,
United Press Staff Writer

Vichy, Feb. 7.—Pierre Laval, stubbornly insisting he be named premier, probably will succeed in taking direct control of the government away from Marshal Petain and return it to Nazi-held Paris, it was understood tonight.

Only the question of Laval's title, whether he is to be called premier or president of an "inner cabinet," was believed to stand in the way of a final settlement.

Nazis Adamant

Admiral Jean Darlan carried to Laval a compromise proposal from Petain whereby Darlan would become premier, in Petain's surrender of his direct authority over the government, and Laval would be restored as vice premier.

Unofficial reports from Paris tonight, however, said that Laval and his Nazi supporters had stood adamantly upon Laval's original demands, given to Darlan earlier this week, that he be named premier, be given the right to hand-pick a cabinet and be held responsible only to an assembly of his own choosing.

Although the collective resignation of the entire cabinet in submission to Laval's demands appeared inevitable, a group within the cabinet led by Foreign Minister Pierre-Etienne Flandin was known to be urging Petain to resist further.

Signs Favor Laval

All signs pointed to a victory for Laval.

Of Petain's present cabinet, it was indicated, Laval probably will retain only Admiral Darlan and Minister of War Gen. Charles Huntziger, both of whom have the respect of the German authorities.

Petain himself would remain merely as chief of state, relinquishing all direct control of the government.

Laval Would Hold All Strings

Laval, as a slight concession, may agree to give to Darlan the role of "dauphin" or "heir" to the aged Petain, but this would be of small consequence, because Laval seeks to become chief of the government and hold all the strings in his hands.

If Laval has his way, one of his first acts after gaining power probably would be to return the seat of the government to Paris.

Petain might share his time between Vichy and Versailles due to the difficulties in the way of removing the diplomatic corps to the German-held city.

Capt. Haddock Urges Donations For Southampton

An appeal for financial aid in relieving war distress in Southampton was received here yesterday by friends of Sir Herbert J. Haddock, onetime master of the Olympic and former commodore of the White Star Fleet.

Sir Herbert wrote P. V. G. Mitchell, vice president of the United States Lines, asking him to "pass the hat" among friends of Britain for restoration work in Southampton. Mitchell has offices at 912 Fifteenth Street Northwest and said last night he would send all contributions directly to Sir Herbert.

"Anyone who recalls Capt. Haddock—and a great many Americans traveled with him over a long period of years—will realize that the need must be great to induce him to make an appeal," said Mitchell.

Reopening of NLRB 'Policing' Decision Ordered by Court

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, Feb. 7.—On its own initiative, the Third U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals ordered today a rehearing on a four-day-old decision which, the general counsel of the National Labor Relations Board had said, would place a "drastic limitation" on the Wagner Act.

On Monday, Judge Albert B. Maris handed down a decision that the NLRB had no jurisdiction in disputes arising between employer and employe after the employer had signed a contract with a union.

In his opinion, to which no dissent was announced, Judge Maris wrote: "It is no part of the board's duty to police the relations between an employer and his employes under a collective bargaining agreement."

Two other judges of the five-judge court concurred in the decision. They were Judges William Clark and Herbert F. Goodrich.

Today, Judge Maris signed an order for new arguments February 20 before the entire bench. The two other judges are John Biggs, jr., and Charles Alvin Jones.

The court's decision Monday reversed an NLRB order directing the reinstatement of Agnes Fahy, an employe of the Newark (N. J.) Morning Ledger Co., with back pay for more than three years. Miss Fahy contended, with the American Newspaper Guild—she was president of the Newark local at the time—that she was dismissed for union activity.

This the NLRB and the Circuit Court upheld, but the court ruled that her only recourse was arbitration, if it were provided for in the guild contract, or a civil suit charging breach of contract.

The day after the Circuit Court decision, R. B. Watts, general counsel of the Labor Board, commented that it was a restriction on the Labor Relations Act which might deter the making of employer-employe contracts.

"The Supreme Court has stated that even when a written agreement has been made, there is a duty to bargain further if changes are proposed," he added.

Victor Pasche, executive secretary of the American Newspaper Guild, had demanded that the NLRB appeal the decision to the Supreme Court.

The ruling "so distorts the purposes of the Wagner Act as to nullify it," he declared.

U. S. Discusses Making Latest British Fighter

By the Associated Press

American production of Britain's new Hawker Tornado pursuit plane, one of the most efficient fighters in the world, was reported reliably yesterday to be under serious consideration.

British authorities were said to be weighing the advisability of making the powerful new warplanes available for manufacture in this country, both for the Royal Air Force and the United States Army and Navy air services, if desired.

The Tornado, which is reported to have a speed of 425 miles an hour and to be armed with eight machine guns and three cannon, may figure in efforts now being made to standardize American and British aircraft production in this country as much as possible.

Developing Facilities

American experts pointed out that manufacture of the new British superplane in the United States would expand Britain's supply of this powerful defensive weapon, give her a source of the planes far from German bombing bases and, at the same time, develop productive facilities which in case of necessity could be turned entirely to American use.

They emphasized, however, that any plan which might be adopted to produce Tornadoes in this country would be a long-range proposition and could not possibly turn out planes in time to aid Britain should the widely predicted crisis for that nation come this spring. In addition to the time normally required to get a new American product into production, some special technical difficulties resulting from differences in American and British methods would have to be overcome.

Outgrowth of Hurricane

American authorities do not concede that latest model planes developed by the United States Army Air Corps and the Navy's Bureau of Aeronautics are inferior to ships of any other power. They regard the British Tornado highly, however, and would be glad to have productive facilities for it.

The Tornado is a development of the Hurricane, which has been a mainstay of British defense against Hitler's aerial onslaughts. In addition to its increased speed and heavy armament, it is said to be able to reach an altitude of 40,000 feet, sufficient to cope with the highest flying bombing planes.

By Dr. George Gallup

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Feb. 7.—The visit of marching members of the American Youth Congress to Washington this weekend raises anew the question of just where America's young people stand on war and peace, on aid to Britain and other issues generated by the war.

The Youth Congress, claiming a total represented membership running into millions, has previously denounced conscription as well as United States entrance into the war. At its sessions this weekend the Youth Congress is expected to go on record opposing President Roosevelt's lease-lend bill for aid to Britain.

Recent surveys by the American Institute of Public Opinion indicate hat on only one of these points—the desire to keep the United States out of war—does the Youth Congress probably represent the rank and file of American young people, youths in every State who seldom if ever join a "movement" or call on their Congressmen in Washington.

Strongly Opposed

Like their elders, young Americans in their twenties are strongly opposed to this country going into the combat.

In answer to the question:

"If you were asked to vote on the question of the United States entering the war against Germany and Italy, how would you vote—to go into the war, or to stay out of the war?" Only 10 per cent of the young voters answered "yes."

On this all-important question young Americans are even more antiwar than their elders. Yet the surveys show an overwhelming vote against war at every age-level.

Here, reported for the first time this year, is the way sentiment now divides at the major age-levels:

	Go in	Stay out
Voters 21 to 29.....	10%	90%
Voters 30 to 49	15	85
Voters 50 and over ..	20	80
(National total—published February 2)	15	85

The survey found a small group, averaging 9 per cent in the various age-groups, saying they were undecided on the issue of war.

Leagues Apart

Institute surveys show that on the important question of aiding Britain, and on United States conscription, the Youth Congress and the rank-and-file of American young people are likely to be leagues apart:

1. The Youth Congress voted overwhelmingly against conscription at it sessions in Madison, Wisc., last year. But even at that time the Institute's Nation-wide studies found voters in their twenties more than 3-to-2 in favor of conscription. In a more recent survey designed to measure reactions to the draft as it stands, the Institute asked:

"Do you think the draft is a good thing?" Voters in their twenties divided 86 per cent "yes," 14 per cent "no."

2. Across the United States today, Institute studies testify, a majority of young people have come to regard aid to England, "even at risk of war," as more important right now than concentrating entirely on staying out. In the latest reported survey on this question 58 per cent of voters in all age-groups (combined) said helping England was the more important. Analysis of the vote of young people in their twenties shows 62 per cent taking this side.

Principle Favored

3. The vote of young people on the specific question of President Roosevelt's lease-lend bill is not yet available in the Institute's returns. Nevertheless the young people's vote in a recent survey on the principle of leasing war materials to Britain is significant. Voters in all parts of the country and all age-groups were asked:

"If the British are unable to pay cash for war materials bought in this country, should our Government lease war materials to the British, to be paid back in the same materials and in other goods after the war is over?"

Among voters in their twenties the answers were:

"Yes"—61 per cent, "No"—34 per cent, and "undecided"—5 per cent.

E'en though it be a cross that raiseth me,
Still all my song shall be, nearer, my God to Thee,
Nearer, my God, to Thee, nearer to Thee.
Little Stories of GREAT HYMNS
Mrs. Adams' message of universal appeal was inspired by the biblical story of Jacob, who fleeing from Esau's wrath, slept on a lonely hillside, dreamed of a heavenly ladder with angels ascending and descending on it, and awoke with renewed faith. It is a triumphant revelation that even in depths of despair, we may be lifted closer to God.

Text of Letter Stimson Sent To Senate Unit

The text of a letter by Secretary of War Stimson to the Senate Foreign Relations Committee yesterday upholding the policy of furnishing fighting planes to Great Britain follows:

On the morning following my appearance before your committee in executive session on Thursday afternoon, January 30, a newspaper of this city published a purported summary of my testimony on airplane deliveries. This publication was not only inaccurate but its omission of certain factual background has resulted in a gross misrepresentation of the actual situation.

(The newspaper referred to was not The Washington Post.—Editor's note.)

The essential misrepresentation thus given by the publication is that, by the delivery of airplanes from this country to Great Britain, our own defensive program has been impaired and the safety of this country thereby imperiled. Such an implication is quite untrue. It disregards completely the fundamental fact that air power depends on productive capacity and not merely on number of planes. It is also inaccurate in that it gives the impression that the War Department could have and would have bought planes which the British are at present receiving on orders placed many months ago and long before the substantial appropriations were made for the development of our own Air Corps.

Far from constituting an interference with the purchase of planes by our Air Corps, the purchases made in this country by Britain and France in particular over the past two years have been primarily responsible for the expansion that has taken place in the aircraft industry in this country.

100% Air Expansion

As a result of these foreign orders the American airplane industry in the latter part of 1939 and the year 1940 was expanded approximately 100 per cent. As early as 1938 foreign countries made available to our manufacturers money for doubling the productive capacity of aircraft engines of the types currently used by our own Air Corps. Substantial foreign orders placed over a year ago for military planes enabled American manufacturers to expand their plant facilities in a fashion which would have been impossible under the Congressional appropriations then current. In the early part of 1940 additional substantial foreign orders for engines and airplanes were placed which required a continuation and a broadening of production facilities of the aircraft industry and its sub suppliers.

It was not until June, 1940, that funds made available to the Air Corps by Congressional appropriations were adequate in size to enable this country, acting alone, to place sufficient orders to justify expansion of the aircraft industry. Until that date it is an undeniable fact that our Air Corps had not had sufficient funds to permit rapid development. Therefore, bearing in mind that it usually takes from 18 months to two years to develop production of a new aircraft motor and about 16 to 18 months to develop production of a new model airplane, you will realize that without the head start given by the foreign orders mentioned above we would at the present time be in a very grave situation as to the plants and facilities which we now need for the pending emergency.

Accelerated Deliveries

Within four to six months we expect accelerated deliveries on late model combat planes on contract for our Air Corps. These planes will incorporate the latest developments arising out of actual combat experience. In some cases where more modern equipment can be obtained by deferring delivery of certain types for a few months, we have felt it wise to do so in view of the fact that such action will help prevent our Air Corps from being furnished with planes which would be obsolete on the dates of delivery.

As an example of the benefits which this Government is receiving from what has been called a deferment to the British, I need cite only one example.

Last December we had on order certain heavy bombers of the B-24 type, the first deliveries of which were expected to begin that month. We consented to defer these deliveries to us in order that the manufacturer might instead make delivery to the British of some of the same type of planes, thus postponing our own deliveries for several months. As consideration for the transaction we received outright from the British a large number of aircraft engines owned by them and urgently needed by our Air Corps. Thus by that deferment we were not only enabled to put into the air a number of our own flying fortresses as well as other types of planes which had theretofore been kept uncompleted for lack of engines, but we shall receive, on the ultimate deliveries of our B-24's, planes which will contain all the improvements which will be developed under combat conditions during the period of the delay. This latter is a most important item.

Presents Summary

(a) Without the early British orders and the French orders which were subsequently taken over by the British, we would have at this time only a small fraction of the existing aircraft plants and productive facilities.

(b) The expansion over a year ago by aircraft engine and airframe facilities makes possible today the production of combat types in amounts which would otherwise have been impossible.

(c) Through the foreign orders in this market it has been possible to maintain full use of the aircraft productive facilities of this country while at the same time expanding them so as to permit our own Air Corps to receive combat aircraft incorporating the latest developments discovered through actual combat experience.

In other words, by helping the British to build up an air force which is now reasonably expected to successfully meet the crises of this year, we have not only strengthened our own security through Britain's increased defensive power, but we have put ourselves into a productive position which will make us immensely more powerful than we would otherwise have been at the time when, if Britain fails, the first blow could fall on us.

I shall be very much obliged if you will kindly add this letter to the record of my testimony in open session, in order to remove the misapprehension which may have been given by the misleading publication which I have referred to.

SECRETARY STIMSON

Ickes, Foster Son Agree on Arbiter In Estate Dispute

Chicago, Feb. 7 (AP).—Harold L. Ickes, Secretary of the Interior, and his foster son, Robert, 25, agreed yesterday to the appointment of an arbiter to settle differences in the interpretation of the will of the Secretary's first wife. The estate is estimated at $800,000.

Mrs. Anna Wilmarth Ickes was killed in an automobile accident in New Mexico, August 21, 1935.

The differences concerned a section of the will in which a trust estate is set up for Robert from which he would derive an annual income of $5,000 in the years before he became 30, $7,500 up to 35 years of age, and $10,000 thereafter. After naming two trustees, however, the will set forth that Harold L. Ickes was to be given full title to all property, including the trust estate.

The Secretary of the Interior since has contended the estate was not a trust to be executed for Robert, but was an estate solely for himself. Robert has contended that although the full title to the estate was turned over to his foster parent, the estate remained in trust for him.

Education-Defense Unit Meets Today

A National Committee on Education and Defense, representing about 60 organizations, will meet today at the Mayflower Hotel to discuss projects in which education may take a more vital part in the defense program.

The executive committee of the group met yesterday at the Mayflower to plan for the main session. The co-chairmen of the committee, Willard E. Givens, executive secretary of the National Education Association, and Dr. George F. Zook of the American Council on Education, were in charge of yesterday's meeting. The committee was formed under sponsorship of those two bodies.

Some of the 60 organizations represented will report today on projects which they have already launched to further the defense program.

Miss Landi Gives A Dramatization Of Refugee Cases

The dramatic interpretation of a boatload of refugees was given here yesterday by Elissa Landi, stage and screen star, at a morning meeting of the Town Hall at the Shoreham Hotel. There will be five similar meetings this season.

Miss Landi, appearing alone on the program, managed the situation by singling out for portrayal a German, a Russian, an Austrian and a Scandinavian refugee, and telling their respective stories as these might be related to immigration officers.

Less somberly, Miss Landi gave a study in manners and morals over the past 200 years. She also portrayed the technical differences between stage and screen acting. Approximately 400 persons attended.

U. S., New Zealand Plan Closer Ties

The United States and the Dominion of New Zealand are planning to establish direct diplomatic relations, it was learned authoritatively today, in a move characterized here as signifying closer and more friendly collaboration in the South Pacific.

Viscount Halifax, the British Ambassador, is now conducting conversations with the State Department, it was understood, looking to establishment of legations and exchange of ministers in the immediate future.

help develop a British air force "which is now reasonably expected to successfully meet the crisis of this year."

Maj. Williams, however, contended that the United States was turning out no fighter plane to compare with the British Supermarine Spitfire or the German Messerschmitt 109.

Like Col. Lindbergh, Maj. Williams said he did not think the British could beat Nazi Germany.

"The defense of your home is one thing," he said. "But to win this war—to crush Hitler—cannot be accomplished without invading the continent. And that I believe to be physically impossible."

The British and any allies they might have, he said, would have to have planes and other equipment that would be superior to the German by a margin of 3 to 1.

Maj. Williams and some of the other witnesses were sharply cross-examined by Senators Barkley and Connally, but no questions came from them when the time came to interrogate Editor Morrison, of the Christian Century.

"For more than three years," Morrison said, "the chief strategy of the Administration in foreign policy has been to confuse the people and in the confusion to commit them to one step after another leading into the war."

He said the American people did not want war, and did not want to tie their destiny to the fate of any other nation. The President, he said, will carry a divided people into the war, a people who may go along only because their President will have put them in a position where they cannot turn back.

"The President's bill now before the Senate," he said, "is just as truly the consummation of a cumulative policy leading to dictatorship as was the final act of Adolf Hitler in abrogating the Weimar constitution and transforming the Reichstag into a body of 'yes' men, whose sole function is to rubber stamp the decrees of a totalitarian regime."

The lend-lease bill, he said, was being considered in an atmosphere of "fantastic unreality." He continued:

"From that day in 1939, when a whale off the Atlantic shore was taken for a German submarine and exploited by the President himself as such, to the testimony offered here by a Cabinet officer who told you that if this bill is not passed Britain will quit fighting, everything has been done to scare the country and the Congress into such a state of nervous apprehension that we would be willing to commit the Nation and the treasures of our national existence to the keeping of one man.

"All the conceivabilities of invasion have been exploited in your hearing. . . . As a result, the state of mind of the American people is that of a vast psychopathic hospital, with its violent ward located on the Atlantic seaboard."

Kingman Brewster, jr., chairman of the Yale Chapter of the America First Committee, said he was convinced that President Roosevelt's avowed aim "means war, whether he intends it or not."

"If a transatlantic war is to be waged," he said, "we would rather make the enemy cross the water and try to land. We cannot quite understand the logic of those who say we are not strong enough to hold an enemy from our own shores, yet say that we can wipe the strongest military power in the world off the face of Europe—and all without sending a single American soldier abroad."

Miss Fay Bennett, executive secretary of the Youth Committee Against War, expressed somewhat the same sentiments as Brewster.

Judge Herbert A. O'Brien, of the Domestic Relations Court in New York City, described the lend-lease bill as "shocking." He said it carried too much power for a bad man to have and for a good man to request.

"The American people," he said, "are not going to be quick-triggered into the war willingly and tamely."

When he said that one result might be civil war in the United States, Senator Connally caught him up on it. Who, he wanted to know, would precipitate the civil war?

Judge O'Brien mentioned the large number of Italians in New York and called attention to the racial hatreds that already exist in that city.

"Who is going to be the generalissimo of this civil war?" Connally pursued.

"There doesn't have to be one," the judge said. "I don't believe the American people will allow themselves to be blackjacked into a war without a violent national convulsion."

When he said that 22,000,000 Americans voted against war in the last election, Connally reminded him that both candidates promised aid to Britain.

"One of them used trickery," said Judge O'Brien.

"Which one?"

"Willkie."

Senator Connally observed that for a judge in a domestic relations court, Judge O'Brien showed a great deal of interest in foreign relations.

"Yes," O'Brien shot back, "and if we mix our domestic relations with foreign relations, we won't have any domestic relations."

William J. Goodwin, Democratic leader of Queens County (N. Y.), who said he swung a normal Democratic electorate away from Roosevelt last November, agreed with Judge O'Brien that a civil war in New York was a strong probability if the United States went to war on the side of Britain. He denounced the "flirting with Red Russia in hopes of making an alliance with her."

Former Gov. Alf Landon, of Kansas, 1936 Republican nominee for President, is scheduled to testify against the bill this morning. Mayor Fiorella LaGuardia of New York may testify for it in the afternoon. Quentin Reynolds, of Colliers Magazine, was ready to testify yesterday and he, too, may be called today.

The prospect now is that Wendell L. Willkie will testify Tuesday.

Poll-Tax Reform

The drive for repeal of the poll tax as prerequisite to voting has gained impressive momentum in Virginia. Prospects for this democratic reform are heightened by a vigorous newspaper campaign and the known sentiment of three out of the four candidates for the Governorship. State Senator Hunsdon Cary and Ashton Dovell, former speaker of the House of Delegates, have included in their platforms a plank favoring retention of the poll tax merely to raise revenue for schools, without any tie to the ballot. State Senator Vivian Page has not stated his position on the issue in this campaign, but he sponsored a repeal bill three years ago. Moreover, State Controller LeRoy Hodges, who may become a fifth candidate with the prospect of strong support, has been an advocate of poll-tax repeal for years. But the joker may be in the hands of National Representative Colgate Darden, the candidate generally conceded to have the support of the Byrd organization. And Mr. Darden has not expressed himself on electoral problems.

Virginians are in the van of a larger movement which took shape last week with the formation in Richmond of the Southern Electoral Reform League. This association, with membership from various parts of the South, may become of considerable consequence in the eight Southern States which still withhold the franchise from persons who have not paid—or had paid for them—the poll tax. Progressive Southerners realize that, apart from the rights and wrongs of the matter, sentiment in the Nation at large may force the issue. Two bills for poll-tax reform are in Congress, and a case which might set a legal precedent against operation of poll-tax laws is pending in the United States Circuit Court of Appeals in Cincinnati. It would be to the credit of any State to democratize its voting requirements rather than to let reform be imposed from above.

What Bengasi Means

The importance of the fall of Bengasi is very great indeed. At the end of only two months of fighting, and at an incredibly small cost in casualties, the British have not only removed any immediate possibility of an attack on Alexandria and Suez, but have also taken control of 230,000 square miles of Italian territory. In the process they have captured more than 100,000 Italian troops and vast quantities of military supplies. But not the least significant aspect of the lightning British offensive in Libya, now climaxed by the fall of Bengasi, is that it probably marks the penultimate state in the disintegration of the Italian army in Libya. To be sure, the larger part of Libya, including the port of Tripoli, is still in Italian hands. But, unless considerable military and aerial reinforcements are sent to Libya, it is doubtful whether there is any point at which Graziani might make a successful stand, should the British decide to press on.

Will the hard-pressed Italians be reinforced? In all likelihood, no. While the Italians were still holding on to Bardia, there was much speculation regarding the imminent dispatch by Hitler of a large air force to aid his ally. Some German aid, it is true, was sent. In one notable encounter in the Sicilian Channel German Stukas operating from land bases so damaged a British cruiser that it had to be sunk, and scored hits on a destroyer and on the aircraft carrier Illustrious. It is now revealed, however, that the Illustrious, though belonging to a type of naval vessel deemed most vulnerable to air attack, managed to reach Malta and later Alexandria under its own power. And the devastating British air raids on Catania, the Italian air base in Sicily, have made it difficult for Italian and German fliers to repeat last month's battle. Moreover, Hitler may not want to divide his forces on the eve of an all-out attack on Great Britain. In any event Italy's position throughout Africa is now desperate while, at the same time, the British, by taking Bengasi, have acquired not only an air base from which they can effectively bomb Tripoli and Sicily, but also a naval base to clinch their control of the eastern Mediterranean.

The only development which might materially offset their striking victories of the last two months would be a German occupation of Bizerte, in Tunis, coupled, perhaps, with the transfer to the Reich of the French fleet. But, despite extreme pressure on the Vichy government, the French have refused to comply with Hitler's demands, a refusal which is now explicitly underwritten by Gen. Weygand. In so doing they are serving the immediate interests of Great Britain and the long-run interests of France, the restoration of whose independence depends on a British victory.

Back To Purposes

It is axiomatic that if the price of national unity is a trimming of the lend-lease bill, such trimming should be made. Unity is even more of a shield and buckler than a two-ocean navy. And it is even more potent as a weapon against Hitlerism than arms. All that proponents of the measure wish to insure is that the purposes of the bill shall not be emasculated.

These purposes need to be restated in the light of the House debate. Aid to Britain hitherto has been given on a strictly commercial basis. The word aid, therefore, is a misnomer. We have received cash for the materials we have delivered at tidewater to the British; those materials are being used to an end which even the opponents of the lend-lease bill acknowledge is in our national interest; British purchases are subsidizing our industrial capacity for our own direct defense. However, we have got into a national habit of thinking of these benefits merely as aid to Britain. Aid is scarcely the word even for the lend-lease bill. We came to the measure because British dollar resources were dwindling away so fast that the British could no longer finance their victory schedule. The lend-lease bill affords a device for keeping up British purchases through the leasing of "defense articles." We shall get the same articles back in return, or their equivalent. The motive of the President's proposal is to take away from British preoccupations any worry on the score of financing their victory schedule of purchases in America.

Thus the purpose of the measure is to authorize this new method of arranging for Britain's access to our arsenal. It is an authorization pure and simple. However, many of the speakers in the House seem to think of the bill as an appropriation measure. Even Representative Wadsworth, in his otherwise admirable speech, leans to this construction. The fact of the matter is that the Administration would still have to ask Congress for the appropriations necessary to build up our arsenal. In Congress, in short, would still repose the power of the purse.

This was specifically brought out in Mr. Morgenthau's testimony. Here is the colloquy:

Mr. Morgenthau: There is no figure mentioned at all, because this bill does not carry any appropriation.

Mr. Fish: That is correct.

Mr. Morgenthau: And I take it if it did we would be appearing before the Appropriations Committee.

Mr. Fish: But the Congress can put it in.

Mr. Morgenthau: They have to put it in.

Mr. Fish: I asked you what you think should be that limit.

Mr. Morgenthau: And I am trying to say that at this time for me to say is very, very difficult, but I think that after you gentlemen and ladies and the Appropriations Committee hear from the Secretary of War and the Secretary of the Navy, and the National Defense Commission, that Congress will be able to decide what figure should go into the appropriations bill.

To be sure, upon the President would rest the responsibility for apportioning our "defense articles" as between our own defenses and what both candidates in the last election, amid general acclamation, called our front line, namely, Britain. It is this apportionment that the limiters are trying to make for themselves by stating a sum as the limit of our aid to Britain. But in the absence of any foreknowledge of what may be required, any such apportionment might condemn our country to inaction when there should be action, and hesitation when there should be decision. It is a job which in these circumstances we ought to leave to the President acting as Commander in Chief. The country has never yet abridged the powers of its Commander in Chief. And it would be the height of folly to try to abridge them at a time when, as Representative Wadsworth himself said, we are confronted by "an attempt to spread revolution all over the world; revolution involving eventually the upsetting of social, economic, and political conditions everywhere, and the imposition of a set of new philosophies upon all nations, including our own."

Win To Lose

It seems incredible that when most business indexes are pointing up, the New York Stock Exchange, in President W. M. Martin's words, is "struggling for its very existence." Business last year was only a quarter of what it was in the depression year of 1930. Failure of the stock market to respond to the stimulus of the defense boom has led some business analysts to conclude that it has ceased to be a sensitive barometer of business activity. As a matter of fact, the stock market has never been a reliable indicator of business changes. It is prone to anticipate and to exaggerate the effect of favorable as well as adverse happenings. In other words, the exchange is ultrasensitive to business changes—so much so that it has sometimes been described as the world's most romantic market. But what can one make of the present situation? Business activity is not only rising rapidly, it seems bound to expand indefinitely as billions are poured out for defense; yet stocks are oscillating within narrow limits, and the volume of trading remains abnormally restricted.

Various explanations are offered for this phenomenon. Those who dislike the restrictions of the Securities Act profess to find the cause of stock market stagnation in Government regulation. The British have been selling their holdings in order to raise the money for their American munitions purchases. But the reason most generally given for the absence of speculative uplift is uncertainty. The long-time effect of the war is still a puzzle, as is the effect of the defense program upon business. Then there is the feeling that, whatever happens, taxes will absorb a large percentage of speculative profits. To the extent that this new-found caution acts as a brake upon excessive speculative activity in the stock market, it is a boon. An active and a receptive market, however, is needed to encourage the flotation of new capital issues by industry. And, if the market remains too long in a state of suspended animation, its usefulness in that respect will be seriously impaired, despite the optimism of SEC Chairman Jerome Frank.

"Isolated Americans"

It was the Democratic Party which last year pledged itself to work for District suffrage, but Senator Capper, ranking Republican member of the Senate District Committee, has again taken the leadership in this movement. His sponsorship of the Sumners resolution in the Senate should serve as a pointed reminder to the majority of its pledge to the voteless District. In taking this step, moreover, Mr. Capper has abandoned his own resolution introduced in many previous Congresses. His support goes to the more popular Sumners resolution because it affords a better chance of "admitting these isolated Americans to the councils of our Nation."

There is no ground for opposition to the Sumners resolution. Unlike Mr. Capper's original proposal, which called for an outright grant of suffrage to the District, this suggested amendment to the Constitution would merely authorize Congress to grant such governmental powers as it might approve to this community. Whether suffrage could be employed to put District representatives in the House, Senate and Electoral College would then be up to Congress. How can any advocate of democracy oppose such a modest step toward application of that principle to the Nation's Capital?

Last year the House Judiciary Committee, of which Representative Sumners is chairman, took the lead in pushing this bill to Americanize the District. Its efforts were arbitrarily blocked by the Rules Committee. Now it is the turn of the Senate Judiciary Committee to take the initiative. The Senate is customarily more hospitable to District measures than is the House. When this issue is again raised in the House, the resolution should carry the prestige of Senate approval.

He Spoke For Millions

Wendell L. Willkie spoke not only for himself but also for the overwhelming majority of Americans of German ancestry when, before leaving British soil, he declared his abhorrence of the "aggression and lust for power of the present German government." Like himself and like his grandparents "who left Germany 90 years ago because they were protestants against autocracy," he said, these people of German blood demand "the right to live as free men." The Nazi regime will find no comfort in these remarks. Dr. Goebbels' censors will do their best to keep such views as those expressed by Mr. Willkie from reaching the German people. They may succeed in doing so for a time. Yet even Hitler has cautiously let out the news to the German people that American assistance to Great Britain and American hostility to the Third Reich are factors to be reckoned with, though he insists that our policy will have no bearing on the ultimate outcome of the war. And as the news penetrates through the veil of suppression, which keeps the German people from knowing what is going on in the outside world, they will discover that the American people, despite superficial differences and disagreements, are a unit in opposing everything the Nazis stand for, and that in this unit are millions of citizens of German descent.

Of Opposition

Walter Lippmann's article in The Post of February 1 on "Opposition to the Lend-Lease Bill" sets forth most clearly its meaning and objective, and also shows that there is nothing new or startling in it—that Roosevelt is not asking for any power that he, or any President, does not already possess under the Constitution. Why then has he not already taken us into the war, as he has that power? Because, as Lippmann says, he earnestly desires to save the country by every means short of war.

Therefore, the assertion that many are making, that Roosevelt in this bill is seeking to make himself a dictator, leads many of us to the conclusion that those opposed to the bill actually prefer to be under the dictatorship of Hitler, rather than pass the lease-lend bill which by a large majority of thinking people is deemed the best and only way to keep this country out of war, and to prevent Hitler from achieving his avowed diabolical ends. They know full well that if Hitler is not checked now the liberties of this country will be a thing of the past and we will be under the heel of a dictator. If this is not accomplished by force of arms, it will be by other means as effective and as deadly, that will bring to an end all the liberties that we have enjoyed and held most dear, and that the founding fathers fought for and would again, under the existing circumstances if necessary!

Answers Mr. Ickes

In his speech of last Thursday, delivered at the Town Meeting of the Air, Mr. Ickes began by stating that nations that do not want to fight Hitler must submit to Hitler. It is a question, he said, of being willing to fight on your feet to live on your knees. The French, he pointed out, were unwilling to fight on their feet and therefore are living on their knees. I should like to point out to Mr. Ickes that this statement is incorrect, because the French were not unwilling to fight but unable to win. If he must have someone at whom to cast stones for the sin of being unwilling to fight, he ought, in my opinion, to select himself. When he was asked the specific question of whether or not he would go to war should the British be unable to win alone, he was reluctant and unwilling to answer yes. And therefore it seems to me that having openly placed himself in the position of one who is unwilling to fight, it ill becomes Mr. Ickes to criticize those who have tried and failed.

Points For H. R. 1776

It seems pertinent at this time to state further that the lend-lease bill is preferable to the direct loan or gift to England suggested by Senator Taft and others because the following objects are not within the range of the direct loan and are within the range of the originally proposed lend-lease bill:

1. Some sort of shipping aid or naval cooperation with England, which, since our safety depends on England's control of the seas, it might be essential for us to extend her in a sudden emergency.

2. The organization of the entire country on an emergency-aid basis, resulting also in something approaching a war basis, if war is inevitable; or, for after war, reconstruction, this being the most essential of all. For a safe and lasting peace for us can be based only on some sort of federation between democracies.

3. The lease-lend bill is planned and advocated by the most popular leaders of the people in response to the entire country's feeling of sympathy for England, and thus creates in the mind of the people the psychology of cooperation in a task undertaken—not only cooperation with the British in their hour of need but cooperation between all groups of Americans.

A Larger Clergy

There exists in Washington at this time a mission for the awakening, extension, and fluoresence of the principles of the Christian religion in the human heart. There is one solution—a bigger clergy, more spiritually fitted, a humble, consecrated clergy. In each there should exist what may be called the "genius of spirituality"—that great and unusual gift of revivifying with pristine freshness, ever vital, ever compelling, though said for the thousandth time, those texts of love, compassion, affiliation, unselfishness that should bind us so beautifully together. Such vitalization must glow with a flame of first burning, not dulled to near extinction.

Such genius enveloped the soul of Dwight Moody, evangelist. Each text, each sermon was gloriously alive and experienced as God poured through him. Tens of thousands were converted and brought to better living.

A bigger clergy—the people are waiting.

Poetic Justice

I'm not at all important,
Just an old-fashioned chap,
But it fills me with misgiving
To watch Hitler change the map.

I never crossed the ocean
In a daring solo flight,
But my heart's not artificial
And I do know wrong from right.

I never traveled round the world,
Nor flew where fancy led me;
But I never asked for shelter,
Then bit the hand that fed me.

Those waves of future leave me cold.
To me they don't make sense;
But when thugs attack my neighbor
I don't sit on the fence.

Tales of sacrifice and courage
Still thrill me to the core.
In fact, I'm just naive enough
To care who wins the war.

Comments On "Births Of A Nation"

We have read with a great deal of interest your editorial "Births of a Nation" in The Post of Feburary 3. It seems that your editorial is attempting to leave a rather unfavorable impression about the fact that the median age of American people has increased to 29 years and that the number of women is almost as large as the number of men. I hope you will not consider this letter overcritical, because I think The Post is a grand newspaper and I read it every day. If it is somewhat critical I know you "can take it" and "dish it out, too."

We think you will agree that there are a lot worse things that could happen to our population than our becoming a Nation of middle-aged, mature men and women and a Nation in which women slightly outnumber men. "Feminization of our culture" is not caused, we think you will agree, by a few more women than men.

In 1820, the median or "average" age of the American people was 17 years, and 58 per cent of our people were 19 years of age or younger. In 1820, about 30 per cent of the American people were in the productive, military and childbearing age 20 to 44 years. Today 39 per cent are in this age group. It may be seen from this that we can now muster a much larger per cent of our population for production and military services. A hundred years ago our population was much younger but not nearly so well distributed as far as age is concerned.

As long as our "prime of life" age group, 20 to 50, is not radically lowered (the per cent in that age group) there should be no serious cause for worry. And the statisticians of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. have shown that there will be no significant change in this age group from 1850 to 2100 A. D., and beyond, even considering a radical decrease in the birth rate. It is characteristic of a population with a fair expectancy of life to have a favorable 20 to 50 year age group, whether the population is increasing, decreasing or stationary, if the movement in population is caused by the movement in the birth rate.

A decreasing population with our expectancy of life has a larger percentage of its population in the entire productive age group, 20 to 60 or 65 years, than has an increasing population. As regards the predictable future our population will have a larger proportion in the productive age group than we have at present or during our peak year of production in 1929. Furthermore, machines of industry and war seem to be replacing the unskilled laborer and the common soldier, so at present or in the near future we should be amply fitted for peace or war, at least as far as age is concerned.

As your editorial spoke rather slightingly about the recent birth-control conference, we might mention another way that a widespread knowledge of birth control can help to create a more even distribution of children and wealth. "Two-thirds of the children of this Nation—its future citizens—are growing up the least-fortunate third of our families," Dr. I. S. Falk, of the Social Security Board, told the White House Conference on Children in a Democracy, April 26, 1939. One of the chief reasons for this unfortunate distribution of children among economic classes, is the uneven distribution of knowledge of birth control, according to the population report of the National Resources Committee.

It is a somewhat common but mistaken idea that a democratization of birth control knowledge would unnecessarily decrease the population. A democratization of birth control knowledge by helping to replace wasteful, expensive and disorganizing means of population control (such as needless infant and maternality, abortion, war, a low marriage rate, etc.) and by permitting a more even distribution of children and wealth, can produce the largest population consistent with a healthful level of living. It can make possible the largest population at any standard of living the inhabitants of a country choose, but certainly no reasonable and responsible people would choose anything below a healthful standard, if they had their choice. And within reasonable limits knowledge of birth control gives the inhabitants of a nation this choice. It is a choice few peoples, if any, in the past have had, which may help to account for the miserably low standard of living of the average man until Columbus discovered a very rich and practically unpopulated "new world."

The Post Impressionist

To The Mountain

There were just Tom and Grandfather and the mountain there, and it didn't seem right that any of them should speak. Being 12 years old, Tom broke the silence first.

"Do you own that too, Grandpa?"

Grandfather didn't laugh. "No," he said, "I don't."

Tom hurried his stride along the wood road, but his eyes never left the flanks of the mountain looming darkly behind the morning mist. "I bet we'll see the whole world from up there," he said.

"Well, I guess we'll get a right good view of all my land," replied Grandfather.

"You mean honest you never been up there, Grandpa?"

"That's right. I ain't had time, boy, I been too busy."

The wood road thinned into a trail and they started up. As they climbed, Tom pondered on what Grandfather had said. He knew the old man was 65 years old and had passed all his life in this country where he was one of the most important men for miles around. But Tom couldn't understand why he had not climbed the mountain before. Here was Tom himself who had come to visit him for the first time in his life. He had insisted that they climb the mountain immediately. Because Grandfather hadn't climbed the mountain before, it showed there was something wrong with him.

He looked ahead at him and scowled. Grandfather wore an overcoat and cow boots and carried a gnarled ash stick. Tom straightened the knapsack and squared his shoulders. Grandfather climbed on slowly as if he were walking to town instead of taking part in an important expedition.

They were scrambling back and forth across a gully now, and Grandfather was muttering and waving his stick at the rocks as though he were telling someone to put them in order. They came out of the gully and rested in a stand of hardwood.

"Good maple," said Grandfather, tapping a trunk. "Mighty hard to get down from here though."

They went on. Grandfather began to blow for breath. They stopped frequently for him to catch his wind. Where the timber thinned out and only brush was left, he got angry at the mountain. He didn't say why he was mad, but Tom knew he was angry at God for creating anything so disorderly, or at least for placing it where a man couldn't put it in order to his own profit.

About noon they came to the summit. The air was so clear it made the country dazzle, and they could see the whole land and away beyond the edges of it.

Tom sat down. Then he lay down and looked straight up at the emptiness of sky. Then he stood on tip-toe to see farther. He gazed west because he had never been over there very far. Beyond the great valley where the Susquehanna curled where the jumbled hills, and beyond the jumbled hills the falling ridges of the Blue Mountains. Away beyond the Blue Mountains were the plains and beyond them the Rockies rising somewhere.

Tom noticed Grandfather was looking down at the valley.

"I can make out the farm," he said. "Look!" He grabbed Tom's shoulder and pulled him around. He made him follow the line of his stick. "See there? That speck is the house and beyond it the barns. See, even from here you can see how it was built on the best sloping land anywhere around."

"It looks awful little, don't it?"

Grandfather scowled. "I guess though when you look at all my land you'll see how it fills 'most the whole landscape. Now, look, boy, and follow me close. Jump that hill south of the farm and you run into the bottom land. That's mine. Follow down the bottom land to the town. That's practically mine, boy." His stick trembled in the air. Tom guessed Grandfather thought his stick was really moving on the land, but to him it merely trembled in the air.

"Follow the big valley up, boy," Grandfather continued. "Half of that's mine. Follow it up there to the dark green where the timber is. That's mine." His fingers dug into Tom's shoulder until it hurt. "It's mine now, boy, but someday it'll be yours. It and more too."

Grandfather's hold on him suddenly made Tom angry. He shook himself free.

"It still looks pretty small from up here," he said slowly. He watched the words hurt Grandfather. The sight of him in that old overcoat with his shiny pants tucked into the boots as he stood there looking at nothing but his own land made him want to hurt him.

"It ain't even half of anything," said Tom. "It ain't a half of the State, and from here you can see two States. Look at 'em, Grandpa. New York and Pennsylvania. It ain't even half a county, and you can see a million counties up here."

Tom wanted to tell him how he thought he was wrong about everything, but he couldn't put the words together. So he just looked west and talked to himself. He talked about what he'd read in books and a lot more he made up. He told about Sullivan and the Continental soldiers pushing up the Susquehanna, driving the Indians before them so the British couldn't outflank Gates away over on the Hudson. He told how old Gen. Sullivan drove them clean to the Finger Lakes to make the country free.

He explained how this was the highest mountain in northern Pennsylvania, and how you could look from the highest mountain to the highest mountain right across the country until you came to the Pacific Ocean. He said something about the plains having highest mountains, but he didn't know exactly what he meant.

Grandfather sat and didn't look at his land and didn't look at Tom, but just sat motionless.

After a while he got up. He was pale. In his curled hand the stick trembled like a live ash limb in the winter wind.

"We're going down now," he said.

"Why?" wailed Tom.

"We're going down," said Grandfather in a low voice. "It ain't good to climb mountains when you're old. You've got to do that when you're young."

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Presidential Power And Congressional Control

ONCE AGAIN, in dealing with the lease-lend bill, we are confronted with the perennial difficulty of the American Government. It is how to relate the Presidency and the Congress so that the Executive may have adequate power and the Legislature may have adequate control.

LIPPMANN

Never have we found, except temporarily, a definitely workable solution. Since Washington's second term the pendulum has swung back and forth from one extreme to another—between strong Presidential authority and Congressional supremacy—from the Presidency as conceived by men like Washington, Hamilton and Marshall, like Jackson, Lincoln, Theodore Roosevelt, Wilson, and Franklin Roosevelt to the Presidency as conceived by Whigs like Clay and Webster, by the Republicans who fought Lincoln, by Thaddeus Stevens, or as administered by such Presidents as Pierce, Buchanan, Arthur, Harrison, Taft, Harding, Coolidge, and Hoover. There is nothing new in the pleas now being uttered against granting powers to the President; they have been made against every strong President in American history. "No one at a distance," says George W. Julian in his memoirs, "could form any conception of the hostility of the Republican members of Congress to Lincoln at the time of the final adjournment" of the Thirty-seventh Congress in 1863; "it was the belief of many that our last session of Congress had been held in Washington. Senator Wade said the country was going to hell, and that the scenes witnessed in the French Revolution were nothing in comparison with what we should see here."

LINCOLN'S administration is, in fact, a classic example of how our failure to work out a satisfactory relationship between the President and Congress will cause the pendulum to swing violently. As Prof. Lovejoy has just reminded us, Lincoln was at war for weeks before he called Congress in session. He set up a limited conscription before Congress authorized it. He suspended the writ of habeas corpus without Congressional ratification. He pledged the consent of the United States and paid out money without appropriation. He waited till Congress had adjourned and then issued the Emancipation Proclamation. And while this was going on, Congress was trying to run the war through a joint committee which undertook to force the appointment and removal of generals, and to interrogate the commanders on their strategic plans. And when Lincoln was dead, the pendulum swung and the country had inflicted upon it a dictatorship from Congress which brought about the black history of Reconstruction.

No one can read the record of the unending conflict between the President and Congress without realizing, it seems to me, that the lack of a working arrangement between them exposes our Government to continual trouble. We have not found a way to give the President his necessary powers without impairing the control of Congress. And we have not found a way to give Congress control without depriving the President of essential power.

THIS DIFFICULTY can be resolved, but only by the display of self-restraint, objectivity of mind, and magnanimity which are rare indeed in public life. The difficulty will never be resolved by those who, if they like the President, are for him regardless, who if they do not like him, incite Congress to resist him. President Roosevelt has a bad record in his dealings with Congress; the impartial historian will surely say that he drove Congress in the days when it would have been just as easy and far wiser to win the confidence of Congress. But though this explains, it does not justify the opposition who now, when it is necessary to vest him with certain powers, would rather risk the failure of a policy they approve than give the President authority to execute it.

Nor will the problem be made soluble by developing an ideology, historically quite false, on the line now being taken by former President Hoover and those who share his views. They are suffering from the fundamental misapprehension that our civil liberties and the essentials of representative government can be preserved only if the Presidency is a weak office. They start with the conviction, which Mr. Hoover expressed before he became President, that "if we examine the fate of wrecked republics over the world, we shall find first a weakening of the legislative arm," and seeing that Hitler, Mussolini, and Stalin have dismissed the legislature, they conclude that whatever weakens the executive, whatever aggrandizes the legislature, makes for the preservation of liberty.

THIS IS, I submit, a misreading of history. The contemporary dictatorships have not evolved, as Mr. Hoover assumed, out of a strong executive and a weak legislature. On the contrary, both Mussolini and Hitler overthrew a weak executive surrounded by a legislature which had all the power there was but could not exercise it. Dictatorship does not evolve out of strong, coherent, decisive government; it is the result of a reaction against a government which is so weak that it cannot act effectively at home or abroad. Anarchy, disorder, impotence, paralysis, and humiliation are the seed bed of dictatorship. Weak government has never been favorable to liberty. For a government which cannot govern must in the nature of things give way to a government which can govern.

Nor are weak Presidents over here the ones who preserve and promote the proper authority of Congress. The situation which existed when Lincoln overrode Congress was prepared by the feeble Presidents who preceded him. In our own time the weakness of Taft in dealing with Congress brought about the division of his party and opened the way to the strong Presidency of Wilson; the weakness of Hoover in dealing with Congress led directly to the political overturn which has produced the first third-term President. It is not true as the old Whigs once believed, as the Taft and Hoover Republicans now believe, that Congress grows strong in its proper authority by weakening the President's powers or by installing in the office a weak man.

A SOUND RELATION will exist only when Congress takes the view that the way to exercise its functions is not to deprive the President of power but to increase the power of Congress to hold him accountable. Congress will never grow strong by weakening the President but only by strengthening itself. This it has never done successfully and adequately.

Thus Congress has two great powers of control over the Executive—the power of the purse, which is the control of expenditures, and the power of the sword, which is the control over the raising of the armed forces, the conduct of foreign relations, and the declaration of war and peace. But the American Congress has no effective means of exercising either of these powers. In money matters, it authorizes and appropriates. But it lacks any effective procedure, such as exists in the House of Commons, for a regular accounting and audit of the money it appropriates. If such a procedure existed, Congress would be in a position to exercise the control which a representative legislature ought to exercise.

In military and diplomatic affairs Congress is even more inefficiently equipped to exercise an effective control. These great committees, composed of men who rise to the top by seniority and not because they are the chosen and trusted representatives of their parties, are quite incapable of consulting continually and effectively with the President and his Secretary of State. There was a time not long ago when they actually refused to listen to the Secretary of State in executive session. Yet only an innocent or a demagogue can suppose that it is possible to deal with foreign affairs by broadcasting everything affecting them. The fact that Congress lacks a regular and reliable means of keeping its trusted leaders informed about foreign affairs means that coordination and cooperation between the two branches of the Government are almost impossible.

YET THERE IS no other way to establish proper control over the Executive. It is no good depriving him of necessary power. It is no good arguing that mechanical provisos and limitations are a real substitute for consultation, common council, and continuing accountability.

The two branches of the Government will quarrel endlessly at the expense of the Nation, depriving it of the unity it needs and the collective wisdom it should have, as long as the responsible men at both ends of Pennsylvania Avenue deal with one another suspiciously and at arm's length.

Willkie's Return

By Mark Sullivan

A Remarkable Odyssey

WHEN MR. WILLKIE appears before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, it will be the climax of one of the most remarkable individual odysseys in history. As late as the first of January, Mr. Willkie was somnolent in Florida, recuperating from that other prodigious exertion of personal force which his campaign for the Presidency was. By mid-January he was in Washington, moving toward the beginning of his remarkable enterprise. It was January 22 when he left New York; in less than three weeks he gets back. Those 19 days were more crowded with incidents, some significant, some colorful; were more noticed by the agencies of publicity, were more stirring to national interest, than any journey ever taken by any other American in public life. Two comparisons come to mind. One was President Wilson's journey to the Paris Peace Conference; the other the visit of Theodore Roosevelt to the kings and potentates of Europe after he left the Presidency. Comparison of Mr. Willkie with these two should take account of the fact that Mr. Willkie's performance is accelerated by the radio, which did not exist for the others; and by the motion picture, which is now more highly developed. Granting that Mr. Willkie had these advantages, he is still entitled to preeminence. In the midst of the greatest war in history—in competition with battle in Albania, siege in Africa, bombings from the air and sinkings on the seas—Mr. Willkie got front-page attention for throwing darts at a target, buying drinks for the habitues of an English "pub," exchanging quips with a bus conductor.

SULLIVAN

Decidedly, Mr. Willkie has political "it," the kind of personality the crowd likes to watch and read about. By the standards of the time, in the processes by which men emerge and get elevation, at a time when peoples are more disposed to turn to personalities than to rely upon principles and codes and institutions—in such a condition, the 19 days of Wendell Willkie is a modern epic.

Appearance before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee is the closing act, at least for the present—no one knows what Mr. Willkie's future may be, nor how his present performance may enter into it.

WHEN ANY MAN engaged in any enterprise has had a prolonged period of cumulative good fortune, as Mr. Willkie has had since he left for Europe, it is common for the grandstand kibitzers to counsel him, "Watch your step." But Washington presents no special reason why Mr. Willkie should need to do that. He will encounter here, except possibly from a very few, as warm a good will as he met in Britain. Even from those who may dissent from whatever he has to say, he will get serious and courteous attention. The whole of Washington's approach to the problem of war is in the key of tolerance, as was shown in the spirit of complete respect to Col. Lindbergh, indeed tribute to him. It is in the key also of cool reason, conscious exclusion of the emotional. To inject any drama into this debate it was necessary for a young woman to don a death's-bed mask—and her contribution of the sensational lasted only so long as it took to hustle her out of the House gallery.

If any kibitzer were justified in making any suggestion to Mr. Willkie, it might be merely to counsel that between the end of his journey and his appearance before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee he should take a quiet day off for repose and reflection, so as to take himself out of the mood of hurry that necessarily attended his hectic journeyings, and translate himself into the mood of thoughtfulness, of careful reasoning. Mr. Willkie can be completely at home in that mood; and that is the mood that will best serve him and the world on this occasion.

IN THE NATURE of the situation—the recent Republican candidate for the Presidency supporting a proposal of his successful rival, a leader of the opposition party supporting the head of the party in power—there is a natural disposition to look for drama, drama having the nature of presumed resentment by the rank and file of the Republican Party. But the fact is, Mr. Willkie's position on the lease-lend bill so far, as fully and carefully stated by him, does not differ materially from the position of other Republican leaders. In his support of the bill, as announced before he went to Europe, Mr. Willkie carefully added that the grant of the power to the President "should be jealously scrutinized" and "should be granted for a fixed term, not too far in the future."

That statement of Mr. Willkie, with some amplification of detail, could stand as the broad position of practically every Republican in either House of Congress. All are for help to Britain on principle. All want the help to be given in such a way as not to greatly enlarge the powers of the President. As a matter of fact, this is also the position of nine-tenths of the Democrats in Congress.

The Acheson Report

By Merlo J. Pusey

New Avenue To Administrative Reform

SECOND PLACE on the calendar of vital legislation this year will probably go to a very complicated issue usually designated as "reform of administrative procedure." Of course, first place must be accorded to the international crisis and the strengthening of our hemispheric defenses. But the two bills included in the Acheson report certainly hold the position of runner-up.

Both the majority and minority bills have been introduced jointly by Senators Hatch and Van Nuys. The authors of each, who are members of the Attorney General's Committee on Administrative Procedure, will be called before the Senate Judiciary Committee next week further to elaborate their views. And Congress will once more begin to wrestle with the baffling problem of bringing many of the alphabetical agencies into line with standards of efficiency and fair play.

The chance of accomplishing the desired result will be much better than it was last year when the Walter-Logan bill was the only weapon available to the reformers. That measure lost the support of many because, even in its amended state, it would have imposed upon the administrative agencies some undesirable restraints, while failing to correct some glaring defects. It was passed by Congress, in the face of a certain Presidential veto, because majorities in both the House and Senate regarded it as the only effective protest that could be made at the time against the confusing and sometimes arbitrary practices of some administrative agencies.

MANY SUPPORTERS of the Walter-Logan bill feared that the Attorney General's committee would whitewash our chaotic administrative system and thus make the enactment of any reform bill the more difficult. Fortunately, this skepticism was not justified. Dean Acheson and his colleagues have recommended a number of farreaching improvements. In some instances their proposals go much beyond the provisions of the Walter-Logan bill in exacting correct procedure. While the majority is willing to leave the question of judicial review of administrative decisions in its present confused status, it nevertheless points the way to several basic changes in the present set-up.

This fact alone gives the report enormous strategic value. It opens the way for reconsideration of this complicated problem without alienating the great majority of the reformers who rallied behind the Walter-Logan bill. Presumably it puts the Administration behind the move to simplify the methods used by that great body of officials who are forming rules and issuing orders affecting the rights and property of millions of citizens. At the very least the report must be regarded as a competent and thoughtful analysis of a situation which demands remedial action.

There is no denunciation and very little that might be termed criticism in the majority report. The committee wisely confined its activities to fact finding and the proposal of objective recommendations. The facts it has brought to light are sufficient evidence that the amorphous conglomeration of quasi-judicial agencies set up from time to time has not yet congealed into an orderly administrative system.

In each phase of administrative activity—informal and formal adjudication of rights, judicial review and rule-making—the committee found "room for improvement." The "simple lack of adequate public information" about the agencies which are giving effect to numerous policies involving individual rights was found to be "an important and far-reaching defect." Only during the last few years have the regulations and orders of these authorities been published or codified. Even now "principles of decision" envolved by the various agencies are rarely published as rules. Too often important decisions are handed down without written opinions. While the committee does not recommend written opinions in all cases, it cogently points out the dangers of "naked conclusions" and the disciplinary value of committing final decisions to writing.

THE COMMITTEE insists that administrative agencies must not be considered as if they were so many apples in a basket. Each has a different function. Practices that may be appropriate for one might defeat the purposes sought by another. Certainly these variations must be kept in mind in drafting legislation in this field. Yet there are some basic requirements of fair play that must be observed by every group of officials exercising governmental powers. The committee expresses confidence, moreover, that "further progress in the direction of uniformity of principle and practice is not only desirable but possible."

Throughout its study the committee emphasizes the dangers of trying to fit administrative procedure into too rigid a mold. But here again it avoids extremes. It recognizes the necessity of restraints as well as a certain degree of freedom in working out intricate problems. "Administrative agencies constitute a large measure of the motive power of government," says the report; "a problem of motive power is a problem also of brakes; but the necessity of both must be faced frankly when either is in question."

Much sharper complaints about the present set-up are contained in the minority report, expressing the views of E. Blythe Stason, Arthur T. Vanderbilt and Carl McFarland. "The agency which prescribes rules," they assert, "is also the investigator, the prosecutor, the judge, and to a large extent the appellate tribunal." They quote approvingly from the report of the President's Committee on Administrative Management that uncomplimentary reference to "a headless 'fourth branch' of the Government, a haphazard deposit of irresponsible agencies and uncoordinated powers." In the view of the minority, sweeping changes are essential to bring these agencies into line with the requirements of orderly government.

BY WAY OF summing up its indictment, the minority writes: "Indeed, if our committee studies reveal anything at all, they show that the numerous Federal administrative agencies have developed amorphously on the procedural side, with only rudimentary rule-making, with substantial defects in adjudicatory practices, and lacking in useful form and pattern of action." It believes that the present system, or lack of system, for court review of administrative decisions constitutes a "major deficiency." So the total effect of the main report and the Stason-McFarland-Vanderbilt supplement is greatly to strengthen the case for corrective legislation.

Nor does the committee believe that approval of its recommendations should end the reform movement. It asks Congress to set up an Office of Federal Administrative Procedure that would constantly study ways and means of simplifying rules and promoting uniformity. By this means the experience of the older regulatory agencies, such as the ICC, could be more readily drawn upon to minimize bungling on the part of newer and more impetuous agencies, such as the NLRB in its first incarnation. Wide differences in such simple acts as issuing subpenas now exist. Sometimes one agency unknowingly duplicates the studies of another. And the absence of any central body to unify practice common to them all gives rise, as the committee points out, to separate bodies of law that are a source of confusion.

The courts already have an administrative office to look after their business affairs, to assemble facts on the operation of the judicial system and recommend improvements. Certainly the need for a coordinating agency to assist the more loosely organized administrative tribunals is no less acute. Through this single recommendation the Acheson committee has manifested a deep interest in properly integrating these "new instruments of power" into our system of government

IN ADDITION to its general recommendations, the committee makes detailed suggestions to a large number of agencies. It thus strikes at many loose administrative practices at their source. While its general aim is very similar to that of some sections of the Walter-Logan bill, its approach is quite different. The Acheson committee lays stress upon the correction of deficiencies within the administrative agencies themselves. In the Walter-Logan bill the emphasis was upon judicial checks to restrain the abuse of administrative power. With the background provided by this report plus the work previously done, Congress should have little difficulty in passing a bill that will serve both purposes.

South American Students to Tour Va. Next Month

Richmond, Va., Feb. 7 (AP).—A party of 110 college students from South America, accompanied by a number of professional men, will come to Virginia for a three-day tour of the State, February 13-15.

The Richmond Chamber of Commerce in announcing plans for entertainment of the group said today that major stops would be made at Charlottesville, Richmond and Williamsburg. The party will spend Friday, February 14, in Richmond, staying here overnight.

The visitors will remain in the United States until March 1 for a six-week course offered by the Inter-American Institute of the University of North Carolina in collaboration with the Institute of International Education and the Pan American Union.

Dr. J. C. Lyons, executive secretary of the Inter-American Institute, who has been arranging details of the visit with the local chamber, said the party would come to the Virginia capital by bus from Charlottesville next Friday morning.

Dan Topping Fails Draft Physical Test

Greenwich, Conn., Feb. 7 (AP).—Daniel R. Topping, 29-year-old Greenwich millionaire sportsman and husband of Sonja Henie, was reported physically unfit for military service today by the Selective Service Board.

German Dye Trust Ignores Indictment

New York, Feb. 7 (AP).—Federal Judge Alfred C. Coxe today directed that a "not guilty" plea be entered for the I. G. Farben Industrie, known as the German dye trust, to charges of conspiracy with several American firms to stifle and restrict production of magnesium for domestic use.

The plea was entered after the company failed to send a representative to court yesterday when others named in the indictment pleaded innocent.

Union Benevolency

IT HAS BEEN truly said that these dispatches sometimes appear to ignore fine acts of generous humanity on the part of unions of the American Federation of Labor and tend to emphasize the sordid. For this I am deeply sorry, so today's essay will prove that, in some cases at least, the boys do take beautiful care of their own.

By way of establishing a contrast to heighten the nobility of these deeds let us first consider some unhappy cases.

First is the routine, familiar experience of Brother X, as he prefers to be known lest he be canned out of the Musicians' Union and deprived of his joyous fellowship in the brotherhood of labor with Jimmy Petrillo, who governs the union at combined salaries and allowances exceeding $60,000 a year.

PEGLER

Brother X is what you might call a professor, meaning a musician who plays solo in dumps at night, and in order to obtain jobs he must hire an agent licensed by the union to prey on the members. He recently got two weeks' work in a dump in an adjoining State at $40 a week after five weeks' idleness, and his financial score was whittled down to $25 a week by the following deductions and expenses:

Ten per cent to the agent, 10 per cent to the local in whose jurisdiction the job was situated, 10 per cent to his home local for a quarter's dues, and $3 a week for carfare. Total pay, $80; total dues, commissions and expenses, $30.

THERE IS AN unemployment fund raised by assessment on members of his home local, but Brother X has been advised that he must be out of work for five years, continuously, in order to participate and, nevertheless, must be a member in good standing, meaning that he must have paid his dues steadily, though unemployed all that time. So the unemployment fund is not for him, and he is inclined to take a rather gloomy view of unionism as a personal issue.

Moreover, further to accentuate the sordid before we turn on the sunlight of nobility, the same union within the past year has rejected proposals to confer paid-up life membership on members who have been in continuous good standing for 25 years or more.

But now, if you will shield your eyes from the glare, you will be shown how generous the Musicians Union is—not only to Jimmy Petrillo with his $60,000 a year plus, and never a strike or layoff, but to Mr. Joe Weber, the former president, who enjoyed many years of uninterrupted luxury in that position until Petrillo pushed him out in 1940. Mr. Weber, like Brother Bowen, the former president of the bricklayers, was made president emeritus or technical adviser to the higher statesmen of his union, at $20,000 a year for life, in addition to his compensation and perquisites as vice president of the American Federation of Labor and member of its executive council. President Emeritus Bowen gets $10,000 a year for life from the bricklayers, with no strikes or layoffs, come rain, snow or sickness.

And not long ago, wishing to express further their affection for Brother Joe Weber, the ruling classes of the Musicians Union voted to provide him with an automobile for his own use, together with a salaried chauffeur and all the cost of maintaining and running the car, and all insurance and any and all damages and legal services resulting from accidents, plus permission to trade in such car and get a new one whenever he likes.

Brother X, who plays in dumps and kicks back so much of his pay for the privilege, is paying Brother Weber's $20,000 salary and the costs of the car and extras, but he seems a surly brute, so we will not ask him whether he does this willingly. He might make a scene.

And, furthermore, the Pressmen's Union has voted emeritus status for life to President George Berry, the millionaire labor leader and country squire of Tennessee, at $6,000 a year plus an office and secretary, if and whenever anyone succeeds in easing him out of the job in which he became an employer himself and a magnate in the printing and land business.

This was done in the last convention, quietly and unobtrusively, as befits such deeds of generosity, by act of the politicians in control of the union. And in the orations on the issue, which went through as if greased, no reference was made to the unhappy litigation of 20 years ago in which the United States District Court held that Brother Berry had confused his personal holdings with those of his union and ordered him to adjust things in favor of the membership. This unfortunate jangle was carried to the Court of Appeals, but there vanished from view with a memorandum that it had been settled between the parties, and Brother Berry retained his power over the pressmen.

These citations are offered just to show that, as some critics have said, the unions really do take care of some of their own in a very handsome way.

Britain's Outlook

By Harold J. Laski

Common Man Steeled For Invasion

London.

FOR PRACTICALLY ten days we have had a comparative lull in night raiding; and it is difficult not to conclude that this is the peace which precedes the storm. Exactly when and how the attack is to come we do not, of course, know; that Hitler is committed to attack seems clear from all the evidence. He is committed to it by his need of quick returns. The British effort, backed by America, is beginning, as the African situation makes clear, to get its stride, and delay in delivering a knockout blow is the one thing Hitler dare not risk.

LASKI

I think I speak for all my fellow citizens when I say that we await the outcome with confidence. It is not only that we are in possession of greater resources. It is not only, either, that our blows at Italy have shown that we are learning important lessons from the Polish and French campaigns. It is, above all, the steeled hearts of the civilian population and the new self-respect that have emerged from the battering of the last four months that is the basis of our faith. That the attack will unleash terror in all its forms none of us doubts. That there is no terror which can break our spirit none of us doubts either. We will, of course, pay a heavy price; but we all see the high road to victory on the other side of the attempt at invasion. For here is going to be the first overwhelming failure of Hitler's plans; and he cannot afford that failure.

WE HAVE BEEN heartened, too, by the friendliness of our visitors from the United States. Mr. Hopkins and Mr. Willkie will, I think, give Americans a great account of Britain's temper. The welcome they have received has been profound. They have been taken as an expression of good will which transcends all party boundaries in America. For Mr. Hopkins, everything has been opened; it is not too much to say that never has the mind of the British government been so fully revealed to a stranger. And it should be added that Mr. Hopkins has fulfilled his mission with tact and insight beyond all praise. Labor ministers and Conservative ministers alike have spoken to me with enthusiasm of his quickness of perception, the warmth of his sympathy and the range of his understanding. We owe the President a very special debt for having chosen an emissary who has grasped so instantly and profoundly the character of our problems.

The British public took Mr. Willkie to its heart from the moment of his arrival. He would, of course, have been welcomed if only for the stand he had taken during the campaign on the "aid for Britain" issue. But in a few hours he made himself felt as a person whose hold on American opinion was quickly understood. He did not stand on his dignity. He was direct and simple and friendly. There was not a wrong phrase or a false step in his attitude. He kept above and outside politics in the ordinary sense of the term. His energy was as remarkable as his determination to see things for himself. And I know he has understood that resolution and courage of ordinary people here in a way that they simply cannot be understood unless they are seen at first hand. I think Mr. Hopkins and Mr. Willkie both would testify that there has not been a year in British history that has shown a finer spirit. The common man feels that he has become a symbol of world liberty. He can measure something of what depends on him. Our American friends have seen that he will not fail in the task that is before him.

It is, I think, of interest to illustrate this spirit by one example that moves me greatly. W. P. is a postman of the little village in Essex where I live. He began life as a footman in a great house; after the last war, in which he lost an eye, he entered the postal service. There is no village activity in this war of which he is not the center. Three nights a week he is an air raid warden in an area where German planes are continuously active. His tiny cottage houses two child evacuees from East London who have so learned from him the enchantment of country life that nothing would induce them to go home. On his free nights he drives to the lecture dances for adult evacuees who find a village 11 miles from the nearest movie a difficult experience. These he organizes in his spare time. W. P. is not, in the lettered sense, a cultivated person. But if ever I met the temper of democratic citizenship, his is its embodiment. He gives himself with spontaneous goodwill to the service of others in a way that makes respect for him part of one's self-respect.

IN THE PARTY SENSE, W. P. is not politically minded; if anything, I suspect that he votes Conservative. But I have met few people in this war who understand better than he the real essence of the cause for which we are fighting. He comes, of course, from that stout East Anglican stock which formed the backbone of New England. His forebears have lived in our village for 400 years and they went out with Cromwell to Marston Moor and Naseby. For him, what is central in the war is that neither we nor those whom Hitler has conquered shall have their lives defined for them from the outside. What he hates is the cruelty of power. His wants are few and simple; but he must be able to decide upon his wants. He will help and serve gladly; but his master must be one of his own.

W. P. likes to read, in a slow, somewhat shy way. A month ago or so I lent him a biography of Lincoln. As a rule, he returns the books he borrows with no more than a curt praise. But the life of Lincoln opened in him a fountain of comment. "He was a rare man," he said. "He knew what common folk were like inside." He had never read before the Gettysburg speech but I thought his phrase for it was worth a hundred more sophisticated utterances. "'Twere like a chapter from Isaiah," he said; and he confessed that the second inaugural seemed to him like what he felt in church in a moment of deep religious experience.

W. P. IS NOT a unique person just now. He is the man who, in every shelter and every street, has responded to the call of danger, whose spirit embodies, as nothing else embodies, the power that Hitler cannot break. And when he has given Britain victory and the help to win, none will be able to persuade him and his kind to vengeance; respect for other human beings is the cardinal principle of his life. He is the man for whose survival I want Americans to care deeply. For on the preservation of his qualities depends the future of civilized life.

Rosalind Russell and Melvyn Douglas, Earle, Trace Pattern of Wedlock's Successful Failure; 'No Time for Gloom,' a Breezy Stage Revue

"THIS THING CALLED LOVE." Columbia picturization of a play by P. J. Wolfson, costarring Rosalind Russell and Melvyn Douglas, with Binnie Barnes, Allyn Joslyn, Gloria Dickson, Lee J. Cobb, Gloria Holden, Paul McGrath and Leona Maricle. Directed by Alexander Hall. At the Earle.

THE MORAL—If marital comedies ever have a moral—seems to be that brides and grooms should "adjust" their personalities before marriage, rather than afterward. There are, it appears, elements of frustration in any matrimonial pact that presupposes the necessity of a "plan" of "acquaintanceship" between contracting parties that have known each other and wooed over a brief period of only five days, even if those five days have been spent under the exaggerated romanticism of soft equatorial breezes and tropic stars. Meteorological considerations apparently have precious little to do with the impetuous impulses of perverse human instincts, and young people in love had better find it out sooner than later. If they don't, plenty of hob can be raised with their design for living.

BELL

That is the way it is with "This Thing Called Love," presented yesterday for the first time on a local screen at the Earle Theater, with Rosalind Russell and Melvyn Douglas as the principal protagonists of the theory that time, tide and high temperatures wait for no man. The whole thing might be dangerously inflammatory and a shadow or two on the murky side were it not the beneficiary of Columbia's uncommon adroitness in skirting the edges of impropriety with complete discretion. "This Thing Called Love" is almost naughty, but not quite.

One might say, to begin with, that a young mining engineer should have had better sense than to fall so desperately in love with the seductive statistician of a large insurance company, who has evolved deep-seated convictions as to why there are so many divorces. It all comes down to the simple fact that middle-aislers don't know each other well enough when they arrive at the altar. That is the precursor of a potential catastrophe that easily can be averted by a three months, probationary period between the tying of the knot and the consummation of the marriage vows. Oh, yeah? "This Thing Called Love" sets up a pretty strong case to the contrary. During the course of its disclosures, it is made transparently clear that there is many a slip twixt the coupling and the lilt of the marital lute. These impediments take the form of unintentional trickery on the part of both husband and wife, the wangling of a huge South American loan, the almost illegal laxity of shining legal lights and, to cap the climax, a bad case of poison ivy infection that possesses tremendous powers of disruption in an already strained connubial relationship. Out of all this has been compiled a fable that is too long, a trifle too ardent in its pursuit of "sophistication" and not always wholly sane. But in the large view it is gayly on the side of sprightly fun.

The mainspring of the whole "affair"—and that expresses it mildly—is Rosalind Russell, as the young woman with plans she is unable to fulfill once her theoretical ideas are translated into actuality. Miss Russell is a disarmingly beautiful bride, with a sense of humor and a lagging consciousness of defeat. In the opposite role of the baffled Tice Collins, Melvyn Douglas offers an eloquent example of man's futility in any joust with the opposite gender. We poor, deluded males might as well make up our minds first as last that we are licked before we start. Allyn Joslyn, Binnie Barnes, Gloria Dickson Lee J. Cobb and Paul McGrath are foremost among the picture's fanners of the flames that almost burn down the Collins' house of asbestos cards.

Harry Anger's "No Time for Gloom," on the Earle stage this week, is a zippy item. It is put under way by the ebullient Eileen Ritter in a composite performance as orchestra leader, singer and soloist on the orchestra bells, the metal equivalent of a wooden xylophone. This spirited introductory leads up to some very elegant tap dancing by Linda Moody, the "Bill Robinson" of her sex; some lusty singing of Victor Herbert and college songs by the Men of Melody, a strong-voiced double male quartet; the extraordinary combination of dancing, acrobatics and contortionistic feats executed by Ray and Trent, and the genial clowning of Gil Lamb, fresh out of Al Jolson's "Hold Onto Your Hats." The Roxyettes are in and out of there, in the meantime, climaxing their splendid efforts with a semi-patriotic version of their "walking globe" routine, one of their best.

The newsreel and a particularly interesting and informative release in the "Popular Science" series of short film subjects round out an entertainment that holds out no encouragement whatever to the drowsy patron anxious to take a nap.

A Fine Time to Be Petulant!

ROSALIND RUSSELL AND MELVYN DOUGLAS as the marital innovationists in Columbia's production of "This Thing Called Love," currently on the screen at the Earle Theater. A strong cast of farceurs support the costars in this highly spiced comedy of what's wrong with matrimony—and how not to remedy it

Margaret Sullavan and Boyer Costar in Keith's 'Back Street'

By Richard L. Coe

"BACK STREET." Universal picturization of the Fannie Hurst novel, adapted to the screen by Bruce Manning and Felix Jackson, costarring Charles Boyer and Margaret Sullavan. With Richard Carlson, Frank McHugh, Tim Holt, Frank Jenks, Esther Dale, Samuel S. Hinds, Peggy Stewart, Nell O'Day, Kitty O'Neil, Nella Walker, Cecil Cunningham, Marjorie Gateson and Dale Winter. Directed by Robert Stevenson. Reviewed Friday afternoon. At RKO-Keith's Theater.

That soulful aquacade of the twenties, Fannie Hurst's "Back Street," has been remade into a vehicle for Margaret Sullavan and Charles Boyer by Universal. It descended in torrents at RKO-Keith's yesterday an had the customers swimming in the aisles.

This "Back Street" has been splendidly produced, glows with the artless magic of Miss Sullavan, throbs with the romantic appeal of Mr. Boyer and doubtless will enchant those who enjoy nothing more than a juicy, sustained cry. It is what tradition has called "a ladies' picture."

Played in the original Universal release of 1932 by Irene Dunne, the central role of the other woman in a successful man's life is ably brought to life by the ever-sincere Miss Sullavan. Soft-eyed Boyer in the part John Boles played so memorably, is charming as ever, but hardly at home as the Louisiana wonderboy who never does lose his French accent. However, the fault in this characterization, and consequently the story, lies deeper than in the Gallic actor's possible miscasting. For as the love of a courageous woman's life, Miss Hurst has drawn a rather shadowy fellow, certainly something of a heel.

Taking into account the indisputable fact that men can be heels, it is still a bit trying to watch Miss Sullavan toss aside several promising offers just to be around when the light of her life decides to shine. She's shown herself too spirited. And in the nineteen-forties figures of national standing have been known to enjoy the faith of ladies whose careers are similarly admirable.

But shrewd Miss Hurst began her story at the turn of the century when hush-hush was vital. She guided the romance through 25 years with the understanding of womanly behavior on which she bases her case.

Tidal wave of "Back Street," however, is Boyer's deathbed scene, which makes a piker of "Camille." After berating his son for walking in on a corner of his life completely his own, Boyer suffers a paralytic stroke you wouldn't wish on your best competitor. Then, at the other end of a telephone wire that Boyer's son has connected with her (and with no little remorse), Miss Sullavan hears his last gurgle. One other thing occurs that brings a happy ending to these dolorous doings. Tantalized?

There are early touches of humor, very early, to brighten these sorrows. Cincinnati's first auto, with Miss Sullavan and Richard Carlson up, is the source of the laughs and Frank McHugh is amiable enough as a hopeful traveling man. Once under way, the Bruce Manning-Felix Jackson script doesn't allow much room for merriment. On the whole it's not quite so successful a treatment as the 1932 adaptation written by Gladys Lehman and Lynn Starling.

For its supporting subjects, Keith's slips overboard for wit. There is Donald Duck fighting his blithe way through "Timber." There is a new "Information Please," with Actress Ruth Gordon as guest expert, apparently a continuation of her essay of last summer. The newsreels find trouble in Cuba, defense measures in Georgia and Mr. Willkie in London.

"From now on," was the edict of forgiveness "nostalgia is not counter-revolutionary, in a lyric poem."

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, Feb. 7 (INS).—Just as soon as Olivia de Havilland is well enough to work she will check in at the Paramount Studios on a loan-out from Warners. She is to have an important role opposite Charles Boyer and Paulette Goddard in Arthur Hornblow's production "Hold Back the Dawn," the much discussed Kitti Fring's book. But loaning Olivia isn't as simple as all that. Deals between studios seldom are. In return for the De Havilland girl, who does her best work since "Gone With the Wind" in "Strawberry Blonde," Warners will get Fred MacMurray.

PARSONS

The New York plays are being gobbled up like mad by Hollywood studios these days. There was a period when most of them went begging, for the reason they were so censorable they weren't good movies. But now, ah me, ah me, it is different! The moment a play opens on Broadway there is a producer's representative right there ready to put in a bid as soon as the curtain falls. Hal Wallis, who has been in New York, has had a perfect spree of seeing plays with the result that he is buying right and left. "Old Acquaintance," with Jane Cowl and Peggy Wood, is the latest to fall under the hammer to Warners.

You never know your luck in Hollywood. Nils Asther, who's been hanging around for months without getting a break, was signed today for one of the top spots in "Night of January 16," with Robert Preston and Ellen Drew.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Franchot Tone's mother is here and will probably buy the Wayne Morris-Bubbles Schinasi home; Fay Bainter just left the Santa Monica Hospital after a jaw operation; Mark Hellinger will host a big party at Ciro's for Quentin Reynolds, when Reynolds arrives here. The proceeds will be turned over to the British war relief.

Went to Santa Anita the second time this year and if George Raft's horse, Irrelevant had won I would have been a rich woman, but it failed me as it did him. He was with Betty Grable and the Jim Ritzes. Betty had put on a few extra pounds which aren't yet noticeable and so she has been ordered to diet by the studio; Al Vanderbilt was lucky as usual. He is a conservative bettor but he did put a small wager on Son of War, which romped home to the tune of $29 for $2; June Lang, who is still the prettiest girl in Hollywood, was with John Roselli, her bridegroom, and Mrs. David Butler; Mrs. Jack Warner and Mrs. Charlie Feldman arrived in time to see Son of War win from all the highly touted thoroughbreds.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

In Hollywood

Hollywood, Feb. 7.

Have you noticed the cinematic face lifting going on about our town? Don Ameche, buried under beards for years, finally came out of the wilderness and became A screen lover to Betty Grable, then he gave his romantic all to Alice Faye in "The Road to Rio." Alice was glad to shed costumes for a while but she only had a breathing spell. Back she goes to the 1920 vintage for "The Great American Broadcast." And Paul Muni, who practically lost his own identity behind crepe hair and quaint wardrobe, came out as a glamour boy in "Hudson's Bay." His love was not for women, however, but trees.

HOPPER

Hedy Lamarr and Marlene Dietrich, after being smothered in diamonds and feathers, suddenly kicked over the traces and have turned out to be as pretty a pair of hellions as you'll see in a rainy day. I wonder if Garbo didn't start all this by laughing in "Ninotchka." And if you can believe what you hear, Garbo has been laughing ever since, and says, so I'm told, if they ever get her back into one of those Mona Lisa roles, they'll have to catch her first. And nobody but Stokowski, Gaylord Hauser, and Erich Remarque have done that—that is, since the Jack Gilbert days.

Those chronic fault-finders, who are always screaming about bad adaptations of best sellers, must be gnashing their teeth over "Kitty Foyle." All praise to Dalton Trumbo and Sam Wood who transformed a dull and faintly vulgar book into one of the best pictures of the year.

You'll hear Connie Boswell sing one of your favorite songs in "Kiss the Boys Goodbye." Again it's Paramount that comes through for Connie, as they did when she sang in "Artists and Models."

Gene Tierney says only members of your own family would be so brutally frank as her brother, who's a student in Harvard. Only picture of Gene he'd hang up in his room was one of her in the rags she wore for "Tobacco Road." Said he, "Shucks—it's the only one that looks natural."

"Killer" Gray tells me that line in a local magazine about George Raft giving away his clothes is causing him sleepless nights. Letters have poured in, asking for left-overs, which in George's case aren't even old. Writers send their sizes and insist he have the things altered, if you please. One was specific about wanting a gray, double-breasted suit. Nothing else would do.

All through his lean years, Director Norman Taurog talked about buying himself a big ranch house if he ever had the money. While he was in Phoenix, Ariz., he had it, so he bought himself a one-room desert shack, which was built two years ago by a Government surveyor, and he's having duplicate keys made for any of his pals who want to get away from it all.

You're in for a spring freshet of tears when you see Norman's latest, "Men of Boys Town."

Bob Hope, who can't keep from pulling gags, sat down in Cecil B. DeMille's seat at his reserved table in studio commissary, and did a take-off on C. B. giving his boys "Hail Columbia" all through lunch. Everybody was in stitches, when C. B. walked in, took it big, and said, "If I ever produce the life of DeMille, you're a cinch for the part."

Later when they were discussing Leopold Stokowski, Bob said, "Oh, he's just a high-brow Kostelanetz."

Joel McCrea was snapped on his own rearing horse, and picture will be the model for a 20-foot statue to be shown in the opening sequence of "Pioneer Woman," when Barbara Stanwyck appears at the young age of 109—after which, the story does a back-flip and they start in when she's 16 and Joel 22. Wait until you see his Gen. Grant beard. He hasn't dared show that face to his own children.

When Paul Lukas was playing a revival of "The Doll's House" on Broadway, he spent his off-days watching Martha Scott's performance in "Our Town." Now they're working together in "They Dare Not Love," and talk excitedly about doing a play on Broadway together. But it will be a long time before Hollywood lets Martha go.

Soft Glitter in 'Dressmaker' Diamonds

Real jewels—not paste ones—will be a feature of the benefit fashion show for the Goodwill Industries Tuesday afternoon at the Shoreham Hotel. Jewels for the proper occasion will be modeled on clothes from a local store. These jewels, from Edmond Frisch, of New York, represent some of the most expensive in the world. The Dresden china beauty of the girl above sets off to perfection the gleaming white diamond ensemble, including a dressmaker diamond necklace, soft and pliable; huge scroll-like earrings, an emerald-cut ring and a trio of bracelets in diamonds and aquamarines

Choice of Jewels Is Means Of Expressing Individuality

By Jane Driscoll
The Post Fashion Editor.

Every woman should have a little glitter in her life. But there is no jewelry that should be more individual or bought with more care than diamonds.

Not every woman can stand the sparkling glamour that some jewels give. A delicate beauty would be overpowered by brilliant jewels. Dressmaker type jewels would look better on her—those that are less elaborate in arrangement and cut to give more of a gleam than a glitter. These jewels show off to more advantage when worn to complement costume. When jewels are worn about the neck, it is best for them to have a soft gleam.

For Exotic Women

For the exotic woman is reserved the most glittering diamonds. She has a beauty of her own which brilliant jewels enhance. She can even try something different in the manner of wearing them, as putting clips over the ear. This arrangement requires an upswept hairdress to give the proper effect. Necklaces and jewels worn next to the face are not taboo, even if they are brilliant.

Most jewels, especially diamonds, are only one of a kind. Once a clip or brooch is selected, it becomes yours—perhaps even your talisman. If it is unusual enough, it can be worn in a number of ways. Friends will come to think of it as part of you.

Good Taste Essential

Wear jeweled bow-knot pins, geometrical shaped clips, necklaces and earrings. Try them as lapel pins, on gloves, sleeves or belts. Jeweled sprays look especially well in pompadours for evening. They can make an old dress look like a spanking new one and an inexepnsive new one look like an original model.

Whether you wear real jewels costing hundreds and thousands of dollars, or merely the paste variety, wear them with distinction. Just remember that many women who can afford the best jewels seldom wear the real ones, but a facsimile of them.

Eating Vitamins Aid to Beauty And Health

THE YOUTHFUL vitality that keeps skin glowing, hair burnished, eyes sparkling! Why do so many women young in years lack this vitality, while others much older have it in abundance?

Vitamins, we are learning today, play a tremendous part in keeping us vital and youthful.

Know which foods are vitamin-high and which are vitamin-low, revise your menu accordingly and you may work a magical change in the health and looks of your family—and yourself!

Tomato juice has nearly all the vitamins and, like grapefruit juice and orange juice, has lots of Vitamin C, which helps to keep you supple and young.

Whole wheat bread is one of the foods that provide Vitamins B and G, which help to keep nerves steady. And fat fish such as salmon is a source of Vitamin D important to sound teeth and bones, healthly tissues.

Send 15 cents in coins for our booklet "Vitamins for Health and Beauty," to The Washington Post, Home Institute, 189 West Nineteenth Street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address and the name of booklet.

Past National President of High School Fraternity Says Boy of 16 Is a Bit Too Young to Be Allowed Unlimited or 'Self-Determining' Use of Automobile

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I found myself on "familiar ground" in reading your discussion (in Wednesday's column) of a widowed mother's worries about her 16-year-old son's late hours,—which started when he became a "social favorite," as a result of joining a small fraternity, getting a driver's license and being allowed the use of the family's new car. I feel justified in adding my own observation to those of your "panel" of four young men, ranging in ages from 21 to 26.

While attending high school and preparatory school, I became a member of a "small fraternity," and later was elected national president of the society. In this office I had frequent occasion to defend the "social system" of the fraternity, not only before P.-T. A. meetings, but also to cautious individual parents who wished (justly and wisely) to know what kind of influence the system would have on their sons. "Worried Mother's" letter and your reply brought back memories of those debates and conclusions.

The "age range" in our fraternity extended from the first year of high school to post-graduates,—and it was the responsibility of the older members to appraise and correct the more obvious faults of the younger fellows. This we found we could do oftentimes more effectively than their parents,—probably because (1) we talked to them "man-to-man" fashion, and (2) because they almost unconsciously imitated our example, from day to day.

All this was some years ago (I am now 24), and in the meantime I have seen quite a bit of the world, having lived for two years in the Far East—but, looking back, I think we preached and practised a safe-and-sound philosophy of conduct.

Now, here is what I wish to say: The boy in question is 16 years old. The consensus advice offered by your "panel" of consultants (who range in ages from 21 to 26) would seem to apply better to young men their age than to a boy five to ten years younger. It has always seemed to me that a boy 16 is a bit too young for unlimited or "self-determining" use of an automobile, particularly at night.

Believe me, most boys of 16 lack both the experience and the foresight to comprehend the hazards (the almost inevitable catastrophe) attendant on senseless fast driving, reckless "party" driving, racing, parking in secluded park areas, etc. In the fraternity we saw boys of 16—given unlimited use of the family car by parents eager to "promote" their son socially—getting into difficulties by one of these routes.

Both for the benefit of the boy and in defense of the jealously guarded reputation of the fraternity itself, it became ritual that each new member should be carefully cautioned—both at the time of admittance and thereafter when needed—in regard to the viewpoint of the fraternity on the following points:

Firstly: His family car was not his car—although the responsibility for its proper usage was certainly and seriously his. He was of an age and intelligence capable of understanding risks. He was being trusted by those who rode with him, and therefore had a concomitant obligation to protect them.

Secondly: Drinking (to some extent inevitable) like a gentleman is tolerable. Drinking like a fish is not. And there is as much difference between the two types of drinking as there is difference between gentleman and fish. Therefore the slogan, "Give me milk; I'm driving," was a darn good slogan, under all circumstances and in any company.

Thirdly: Idleness breeds mischief and, by the same token, aimless driving around at night leads to no good. Parking with girls, anywhere, any time, always "pays off" in more harm than pleasure. The girls themselves are likely to disapprove; their parents certainly will, and in the long run the boy is making an unsavory name, not only for himself but for anyone who associates with him.

Thus, driving, drinking and parking were but three of the many "points of conduct" that we discussed time and again,—always affirming the conclusion that "discretion pays." Concrete examples served to illustrate. You can readily imagine the unforgettable moral of the lesson when young members watched rescue workers disentangle the broken, bloody bodies of foolish classmates from a wrecked car. And the moral taught by the "party drunk,"—who was disliked, distrusted and disgusting. And the awkward, sometimes scandalous, plight of a boy and girl who were paying in shame and suffering for having stayed out, once too often, in the "wee sma' hours of the morn."

We all know that parties and dances often last past midnight; that Hot Shoppe refreshments are neither palatable or digestible when "swallowed whole;" that you can't deliver your own girl and a double-date home in a matter of seconds—and that, therefore, an hour's grace after the party's end may be a reasonable requirement. However, any discerning parent understands this and is willing to cooperate, if the boy is trustworthy. That means if he sticks to the beaten path on the way home and also keeps in mind the next day's responsibilities as well as the habits and health of a lifetime.

In conclusion, I wonder if "Worried Mother" would willingly act as chaperone at one of her son's fraternity dances? And would this son take his mother, some quiet evening, to the Hot Shoppe for the same type of refreshments he buys his girl? I hope so. Such "reciprocity" of behavior gives knowledge and understanding—so necessary to the solution of any problem. Yours sincerely, R. E. S.

Excellent Counsel For Boys Under 20

DEAR R. E. S.: You have made an invaluable contribution to the discussion of "Worried Mother's" problem—particularly in emphasizing the fact that a boy of 16 needs straightforward supervision in learning the vast difference between wise use and foolish abuse of adult social prerogatives.

This is a point I would have liked to pursue in the earlier discussion, but was forced to omit because of space limitations. Therefore, I am deeply grateful to you for reviving the topic and giving us the benefit of your observations. You have said something on the subject that really needed to be said—and I trust all young men readers, less than 20 years of age, will take to heart and act upon your absolutely sound conclusions. M. H.

Paris Busier Than Ever With Spring Dressmaking Work

By the Associated Press

Paris (via Berlin).—If Paris is no longer the style capital of the world, the French do not admit it.

Stimulated by a government-appointed clothing organization, they are busier than ever with spring dressmaking activities.

The new organization, called "Comite D'Organisation Professionel de Vetements," was created by the French Minister of Work and Industrial Production, to regulate couture and related industries.

It is headed by Lucien Lelong, a leading couturier, who now has great authority on all clothing trades matters in Paris, all of France and Africa. His decisions become law after being favorably passed upon by two men, the general director and the commissioner for the government. Drastic penalties can be imposed on dressmaking or other houses not conforming to rules of the organization.

Hands Reveal Character, Give Them Good Care

Proper Cleansing, Massage, Exercise, All Necessary

By Ida Jean Kain

It used to be that only a lady with time on her hands had beautiful hands—they were soft, lily white, and looked as if they had never touched a dishpan. But now we don't event think of useless hands in connection with beauty. Hands should be strong and expressive and show some character. If you are to be proud of them, however, you must give them some care—particularly during the cold weather. The cold tends to dry out the oil and to cause inflammation.

The first rule is to dry the hands thoroughly after they have been in water. Never go out with them damp. Certainly you shouldn't run out and hang up clothes with the hands wet. Dry them, put on some lotion, and wear gloves.

Since very hot water dries the skin and breaks the nails, try not to dip the hands into very hot water. The dishes can be washed in water that is lukewarm and scalded thoroughly afterwards. The alkali of strong soaps is injurious so use milk soap whenever possible and wear rubber gloves when strong soaps must be used. It's protection for the hands to wear them whenever you have to put your hands in water. You can get quite used to working in these gloves.

Cream Hands at Night

Put cream on the hands at night and wear gloves to bed—if you want to go that far. Most women don't. You might prefer to massage the cream into the hands, leave it on for a few minutes, then wipe off the excess. Hangnails and ragged cuticle can be averted by putting a bit of oil around the nails each day. Even though the oil is removed immediately it helps to keep the cuticle soft.

One of the most efficacious hand aids is massage. Put on fingertips, massage downward. Then start with the fingertips and wring each finger separately, twisting and massaging from tips to hands. Work along the hands toward the wrists and finish by flapping each hand loosely at the wrist.

Exercise for Flexibility

Stiff hands are never graceful so nowadays a good many beauties take a few exercises to keep their hands flexible. You couldn't do better than "run the scales." Stretch all the fingers wide apart, place the thumb on a table, then bring each finger down in order, stretching them wide apart as you do so. Then flip up the wrist and bend the hands back.

Fidgety hands are never lovely.

To keep her hands shapely and wrinkle-free, Jane Wyman, Hollywood star (shown above), massages each finger with a firm rotary motion

In fact, they are an annoyance. Don't beat a devil's tattoo, or toy endlessly with objects.

When the polish starts to chip off, either replace it or remove it. If there is anything that makes a woman's hands look grubbier than nicked or chiped polish, I'd like to know what it is.

It's About Time

IT'S ABOUT TIME to use this method of rejuvenation for your tweeds and sweaters which have worn woolly. Place the article on a flat surface . . . with safety razor in hand, lightly and carefully, shave the woollies right off

Simple Make-up, Light Perfume, Best for Girls

By Carolyn Abbott.

OVER indulgence of make-up, poor posture, annoying mannerisms and lack of individuality are the teen age girls chief deterrents to charm and beauty. So believes Miss Janice Chambers, teen age charm advisor of a widely known cosmetic firm, who is giving charm analysis at a local store today.

"Good grooming with emphasis on simplicity and naturalness in make-up," said Miss Chambers, "should be the guiding light of teen agers. A little touch of natural looking lipstick, a soft shade of nail polish and a mere whisk or powder are all the beauty preparations a high school girl needs."

For parties Miss Chambers suggests "Pink Party" perfume, a light floral fragrance, as the only additional make-up accessory needed for extra school girl glamour. This perfume was created especially for young girls.

Miss Chambers taboos all eye make-up, rouge and vivid lipsticks and nail polishes for high school girls. These she maintains detract from the teen age's charm, makes her older looking and coarser.

To make the most of her natural beauty, said Miss Chambers, "the young girl should study her face carefully, play up good features and minimize bad ones. Above all, she should preserve a youthful, well scrubbed look."

Ugly mannerisms such as crossing legs, chewing gum, biting fingernails, scratching body, puckering lips, fidgeting with hair are a few general faults that many teen age girl possess, according to Miss Chambers. However, she pointed out that these charm spoilers that destroy poise are easily corrected, provided the teen agers make a conscious effort to overcome them.

This charm advisor also blackballs boisterousness, slouching posture and sophisticated clothes.

'Welcome' Sampler Keynotes Mrs. McCook Knox' Housewarming

The sampler spelling out "Welcome," which hangs in the hall of Mrs. McCook Knox's house in Georgetown, set the keynote for her housewarming yesterday afternoon. Like the house and practically everything in it, the sampler is a very old one, and at Mrs. Knox's party one somehow expected to see a flunkey in powdered wig and knee pants. The invitations to the tea were copied from one of Thomas Jefferson's; the punch served was made from an ancient recipe, and Mrs. Knox's home is part of one of the oldest red brick rows in Georgetown.

Though Mrs. Knox bought the house several years ago, and did it over completely, this is the first winter she has occupied it. The residence is on N Street, in a block where Representative and Mrs. James Wadsworth, Mr. and Mrs. E. Cortlandt Parker and Mrs. G. Howland Chase have all remodeled residences which were in a group built by a Revolutionary soldier on his return from the wars.

Mrs. Knox's house has two drawing rooms opening into each other on the first floor. In each is a fireplace surmounted by a beautiful old mantel which the owner found on antique-hunting excursions into Virginia and Maryland. In one of the drawing rooms is a handsome crystal chandelier which Mrs. Knox discovered in a little shop in Fredericksburg. The tall doors of the high-ceilinged house still have the enormous iron locks and big, heavy keys of the period, and the wide floorboards also attest to the age of the residence.

Mrs. Knox Expert On Early Americana

Mrs. Knox is well known for her interest in early American art. She has written several books on the subject and has done much research, especially in the field of portraits. Yesterday the many guests agreed that her new old home was a triumph of taste and industry.

Charleston Light Dragoon punch was a feature of the party. It had been made from an old recipe which Mrs. Lloyd Shippen loaned the hostess. Presiding at the tea table during the afternoon were Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone, Mrs. Owen J. Roberts, Mrs. Charles McNary, Mrs. Charles Carroll Glover, Mrs. Richard Wilmer, Mrs. J. L. Houghteling, Mrs. Miles White, of Baltimore, Mrs. J. Fred Essary, Mrs. Duncan Phillips and Mrs. Richard Austin Smith, of New York, the daughter of Mrs. Knox.

No Elaborate Floral Arrangement

Instead of the usual elaborate florist's arrangement on the tea table, there was a small bowl filled with limes and lemons, with a pineapple at the top. The dining room, as in so many Georgetown houses, is in the basement. Over the fireplace there is an old painting, a still life (is it the Hudson River School, Mrs. Knox?) and at either side are small vases filled with trailing ivy. Niches in the wall, painted in red, are filled with interesting bits of old china.

The hostess wore a floor-length dress, a print, with a flower design on black. Her daughter, Mrs. Smith, topped off her frock with an unusual South American headdress—a green wool scarf, edged in red, wrapped around and ending up as a collar. Mrs. Smith left last night for New York to rejoin her husband, who was unable to come down for the party. Mr. Smith's mother, Mrs. Johnston Smith, was also among the guests.

Quite the center of attraction was Matilda, the West Indian, who has been with Mrs. Knox for a number of years. She wore a bright red gingham dress, floor length, a turban of the same material and large gold rings in her ears.

Mrs. Felix Frankfurter, another Georgetown resident, dropped in for a cup of tea, wearing a beaver jacket and matching hat. She chatted with Mrs. Owen J. Roberts, who had pinned a white carnation to the lapel of her black tailored suit.

Mrs. Joseph Davies was among the guests, dressed in a burgundy ensemble. Mrs. Millard Tydings was another who dropped in.

Miss Frazer Tells Of Coming Trip

Miss Margaret Frazer, who leaves soon for several months in California, was busy telling friends about her forthcoming trip. Mrs. George Barnett said she will be off next week for a vacation in Palm Beach, with possibly a trip to Nassau to visit her famous relative, the Duchess of Windsor.

"Old Washington" and the New Deal were both well represented at the party. Mrs. Harry Covington was a guest, as were Mrs. Thurman Arnold and Mrs. Mahlon Pitney. Rear Admiral Emory S. Land came by from work to join Mrs. Land, whose tiny hat was trimmed with blue ostrich feathers.

Mrs. Corcoran Thom, jr., was among the younger people assisting at the party. Others seen included Mme. Munthe de Morgenstierne, the Misses Anne and Mary Randolph, Durham Rogers, Mrs. Keith Merrill, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Grant Meem, Richard Wilmer, Mr. and Mrs. Bulkley Griffin, Mrs. James F. Mitchell, Andrew Wylie, Edward Van Deventer, Mrs. James Hamilton Lewis, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Tilden Ansell, jr., Mrs. Lewis Clark and dozens more.

Mrs. North Gives Luncheon Party For Mrs. Lindquist

Mrs. James Mead, wife of the Senator from New York, and Mrs. Ambrose O'Connell, wife of the First Assistant Postmaster General, were ranking guests at the luncheon given yesterday afternoon by Mrs. Roy M. North, wife of the Deputy Third Assistant to the Postmaster General. Honor guest at the party given at the Shoreham was Mrs. Harry Lindquist, of New York, whose husband is owner and publisher of the Stamp Magazine.

Guests included Mrs. Vincent C. Burke, Mrs. J. Austin Latimer, Mrs. K. P. Aldrich, Mrs. Jesse M. Donaldson, Mrs. Joseph Gartland, Mrs. Frank Ellis, Mrs. Charles Wenrich, Mrs. Harold Ambrose and Mrs. Smith W. Purdum.

Laurence Benets Back From Florida

Mr. and Mrs. Laurence Vincent Benet have returned to their apartment at 2101 Connecticut Avenue after a trip to Florida and will resume their regular Sunday "at homes" tomorrow.

The Benets particularly enjoyed a stay at St. Augustine. The Benet family were among the early colonists of the old city, and Mr. Benet's father, the late Gen. Stephen Benet, was the first cadet appointed to West Point after Florida became part of the Union.

On the anniversary of the general's birth, which also, incidentally, was the day of his death, the St. Augustine Historical Society entertained in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Benet. Their nephew, Stephen Vincent Benet, the famous poet, was also there for the occasion, and gave an address before the society.

Mme. Fotitch Holds 'At Home' At Legation

"It's a rare occasion nowadays when a diplomatic wife observes a day 'at home,'" remarked someone yesterday afternoon at Mme. Fotitch's party. And indeed this pleasant custom is virtually obsolete. However Mme. Fotitch, wife of the Yugoslav Minister, received yesterday afternoon between 5 and and 7 in the lovely legation on Sixteenth Street.

Looking as though she might have stepped from the pages of Vogue, the hostess wore a pencil-slim black frock, floor length. Bands of gold encircled the leg-o'-mutton sleeves and bodice. A cluster of gardenias was pinned at the decolletage.

Yesterday's "at home" was certainly not reminiscent of a Cabinet party which usually turns into a crush five minutes after the hostess opens the door. In contrast, it was small and quiet with guests carrying on leisurely conversations.

Mrs. Villaret Pours Tea

The tea table was covered with a cloth embroidered with heavy Yugoslav work in muted colors. A three-branch candlebra, holding lighted pink tapers, was used on either side of the low bowl filled with pink snapdragons. Tiny sweetmeats and paper thin sandwiches were served with tea. Quite a favorite with many of the guests were the fluffy date and nut bars. Pouring at the tea table for a short while was Mrs. Eugene Villaret, who, with her husband, lived in Yugoslavia for many years. Col. Villaret was Military Attache there. Blond pretty, Mrs. Villaret wore a heavily veiled black hat and amusing earrings of tiny clusters of flowers in mother of pearl—a parting purchase in Paris.

Mme. Burya, wife of the Military and Air Attache of the Yugoslav Legation, was generally assisting. Also pouring tea was Mme. Naumoff, wife of the Minister of Bulgaria, who wore a lacy black jacket over her ensemble. Mrs. Robert Low Bacon, swathed in silver fox, dropped in for a short chat before hurrying on to another party.

Mme. Lucet Attends Party

Mrs. Charles McNary, wife of the Oregon Senator, was there as was Mme. Lucet, wearing a pink flower atop her gay hat. Mme. Coste who also wore a big pink flower on her hat; Mme. Baeyens, Miss Mary Patten, Mrs. S. L. Childs and Senora de Baron who carried a mink muff with her black ensemble.

Mrs. Robert Macatee, whose husband is First Secretary of the United States Legation in Yugoslavia, was accompanied by her daughter. They returned to this country last May. Miss Mary-Lane Macatee wore a benedictine wool frock and matching calot. Mme. Bilmanis, wife of the Minister of Latvia was there as was Mrs. Thomas Burke, who, despite the fact that she has just recovered from a long siege of the flu, was sporting a perky straw hat.

Capital Whirl

By Sally Swift

SMALL, INFORMAL dinner parties and cozy luncheons will be Washington's favorite form of relaxation from now until the spring season begins after Easter. Most gatherings of this sort turn themselves automatically into forums for the discussion of international politics and the clever hostess keeps her groups small and congenial.

The Walter Lippmanns were hosts at such a dinner the other night at their attractive house in Georgetown, the house which formerly belonged to the family of the popular Olive Graef, now Mrs. Ballard Moore. Cocktails were served before a crackling fire in the long drawing room where robin's-egg blue walls made a background for spring flowers. An unusual feature of the delicious dinner was the glorified spinach souffle served after the fillet of beef with vegetables, and before the creme brule.

THE GUEST OF HONOR, Charles Peake, who has recently arrived from England in the entourage of Lord Halifax, complimented the hostess especially on the vegetables. He said that both he and his chief are so much impressed with variety and quality of American vegetables that they have eaten practically nothing else since their arrival. This remark, of course, caused all the old jokes about English food to be brought out and dusted off, especially the one about the only three English vegetables being cabbage, brussels sprouts, and a second helping of sprouts.

Someone spoke up in favor of English strawberries which caused Mr. Peake to admit that, "Practically anything you eat raw is good in England."

Gentlemen present that evening were, beside Mr. Lippmann and Mr. Peake, the United States Minister to Denmark, Ray Atherton—at the moment attached to the Division of European Affairs of the State Department—Joseph Alsop and Harold Hinton. So it will be readily understood that the talk of food was only an introduction to politics.

THAT THE international situation is a woman's topic for talk as well as a man's was proved at the luncheon given the other day by pretty Dolly Corbin in honor of her cousin, Mrs. Charles Finucane. Mrs. Finucane, with her husband, has been on a holiday trip to Cuba with a stop in Florida on the way back to see Mr. Finucane's sister, Mrs. Brinkley Smithers. Chic and blonde, Mrs. Finucane doesn't look the political type but she has been spending practically all of her time in Washington at the hearings before the Senate Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Another recent vacationer in Cuba present at Miss Corbin's luncheon was Mrs. Thomas Adams who has been staying on a plantation outside Havana. She was accompanied on the trip by her husband who is expecting soon to be called for duty with an artillery regiment. Caroline Adams, who is counted as one of Washington's beauties since her debut here a few years ago, has completely changed her type with a new hair-do. She has turned from a glamour girl with a long bob to a soigne lady with a smooth coronet of braids.

OTHER GUESTS of Dolly Corbin were Baroness Baeyens, dressed in smart gray tweeds trimmed with red leather, Mrs. Clifton Phillips in black with a perky feather in her hat, Mrs. Donald Downs and Mrs. Newbold Walmsley, whose husband is at the State Department and who is herself Spanish, Mrs. Walmsley was telling the most amusing story of a faux pas which she has made in speaking English recently. Mrs. Downs was elated over plans which she and her husband have made to build another house on their place in Virginia. The new house will be built to rent and if tenants are found before the house is completed it will be built to suit them.

Her scores of friends in Washington will be glad to learn that Mrs. William D. Thomas will arrive in Washington the first of the week to stay with her mother, Mrs. George T. Marye. Mrs. Marye has moved to the Dresden from the apartment which she leased for a number of years in the Massachusetts Avenue building lately taken over by the British Purchasing Commission. Mrs. Thomas, since she gave up her house in Georgtown, spends most of her time on her ranch in Nevada.

MANUEL TRUCCO, son of the former Chilean Ambassador to the United States, and his bride will arrive in New York next week and will come on to Washington to visit Manuel's sister and brother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Knowlton. The Truccos expect to make their home in New York for several years as Manuel has a contract to work for a Chilean nitrate company in their New York office.

News comes that Mr. and Mrs. Norman Keith—she is the former Marion Worthington Luke—are parents of a son born last week. The Keiths live near Philadelphia.

Miss Askenazy Fetes Diplomats

Miss Natalie Askenazy was hostess at a gay cocktail party yesterday afternoon in her apartment on Sixteenth Street. Incidentally, this apartment, a duplex, boasts the highest ceiling surely of any in Washington. Miss Askenazy has been living there only a brief while, but has fixed it up in most attractive fashion.

Yesterday there was a bowl of red roses on the tea table and another larger vase of red and white carnations on a low table in front of the sofa. On a bookshelf was a tall urn holding gladioli.

The hostess is honorary attache of the Polish Embassy and among the guests were several members of the staff. M. and Mme. Poradjewski dropped in, as did Prince and Princess Aleksander Hohenlohe—he was formerly assistant military attache of the embassy.

Senorita Patria de Mencia, acting Cuban Consul here, came in after a hard day's work at the office. She looked like anything but a working girl in a smart beige jersey frock, sailor hat, and carrying a big leopard muff.

Chilean Envoy Dinner Guest Of A. A. Berles

The newly arrived Ambassador of Chile and Senora de Michels were honor guests at a dinner given last night by Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. Adolf A. Berle.

The Venezuelan envoy, Dr. Diogenes Escalante, was there—his wife is ill; and other guests were Representative Edith Nourse Rogers, Director of the Export-Import Bank and Mrs. Warren Lee Pierson, Mr. and Mrs. Livingston Satterthwaite, Miss Mabel Boardman, William Franklin Sands, William Berrien and Miss Dudley Harmon.

Mr. and Mrs. Berle will entertain at a cocktail party this afternoon and again next Saturday in honor of newspapermen who cover the State Department. Guests also will include Senators and Representatives on the Committees on Foreign Relations, and several officials from the State Department.

De Munillas Serve Spanish Foods at Party

Famous Spanish dishes, such as arroz con frijoles (wild rice and black beans) featured the gay buffet supper given last night by the Military Attache of the Cuban Embassy and Senora de Munilla.

The party took place in their attractive apartment at Hotel Twenty-four Hundred. The vivacious, dark-haired hostess wore a black gown with a red jacket embroidered in gold.

The guests were the Minister of El Salvador and Senora de Castro, Senator and Mrs. James Hughes, the Military Attache of the Chinese Embassy and Mme. Kuo, Dr. Leo S. Rowe, director of the Pan American Union, Dr. and Senora Pedro de Alba; Col. and Mrs. Arthur R. Harris, Col. and Mrs. Consuelso Seoane, Mr. and Mrs. Eldon Paul King, Mrs. Marion Webster Dawley, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Wyatt, Mrs. Franklin K. Mrs. Douglas Is Elected Head of Goodwill Guild

By Jessie Ash Arndt
The Post Club Editor

Mrs. William O. Douglas, wife of Associate Justice Douglas of the Supreme Court, yesterday was elected president of the Goodwill Guild. She will succeed Mrs. Samuel W. Herrick, who has served in the presidency for three years.

Other new officers are Mrs. Harold G. Moulton, first vice president; Mrs. Irene Caldwell, second vice president; Mrs. James T. Jardine, recording secretary; Mrs. Ralph McElvenny, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Charles Daly, treasurer, and Mrs. Ryland C. Bryant, assistant treasurer.

The annual meeting was held at the home of Mrs. Herrick, 4916 Indian Lane Northwest, and was followed by a buffet luncheon given by the retiring board in honor of the incoming officers. More than 150 members attended.

Mrs. Herrick Helped To Organize Guild

Mrs. Herrick was one of the founders of the guild, which was started four years ago to assist the Goodwill Industries. All women who subscribe to the industries are eligible as guild members.

During past seasons it has sponsored two benefits a year to raise funds for its work but from now on plans to give but one. That for this year will be the fashion show and tea at the Shoreham Hotel on Tuesday afternoon of next week at 3:45, with Mrs. Roosevelt as guest of honor.

The guild has given aid in many ways to the Goodwill Industries and to the handicapped workers for whom the organization provides employment. It has equipped the cafeteria with a stove, steam table, refrigerator, sterilizer and new floor coverings.

The guild also established a fund of $500 as a nucleus for a Cooperative Relief Association organized among the workers. From this fund a worker receives a portion of his wages during the period of his illness. There is also $25 a month allotted to pay for time employes spend at clinics. Other uses of the fund are to provide medical prescriptions, dentures, hearing aids, orthopedic shoes and devices.

It was through the interest of the guild that many of the elegant old gowns and fans received in the Goodwill bags have been preserved to be rented for costume parties and used for Gay '90's fashion shows.

Antique Shop Set Up in 1937

Recognizing that not only clothing but also furniture and other articles of value as antiques were often among things given to the Goodwill, the guild established an antique shop. When it was opened in December, 1937, the members conducted a sale of old dolls that had been rejuvenated and which they had dressed. They earned $700 in four days. The shop is now in charge of Mrs. Henry W. Duke, who formerly had an antique business of her own and is considered an authority on old pieces.

A year ago, a pantry shelf committee was established within the guild with Mrs. Douglas as honorary chairman and Mrs. Barnet Nover in active charge. This group keeps a supply of staple groceries on hand to be given to the families of Goodwill workers in times of emergency or special need.

The guild, under Mrs. Herrick's leadership, has given aid to the industries and employes in every direction possible.

Chinese Aid Group To Discuss Policy Of U. S. in Orient

"What the United States Can Do About Japanese Aggression in China" will be the subject of a discussion by eminent authorities, followed by an open forum under the auspices of the Washington Committee for Aid to China, on Tuesday evening at 8 p. m., at the First Baptist Church, Sixteenth and O Streets Northwest.

Owen J. Lattimore, director of the school of international affairs at Johns Hopkins, considered one of the world's foremost authorities on the Far East, and author of "Inner Asian Frontiers of China" and the recently published "Mongol Journeys," will be one of the speakers.

Frederick V. Field, editor of Amerasia, an outstanding publication on the Far East, and for seven years executive secretary of the American Council of the Institute of Pacific Relations, will speak on the "International Implications of the Far Eastern War."

Mortimer Graves, administrative secretary of the American Council of Learned Societies, and chairman of the Washington Committee for Aid to China, also will speak.

Mrs. Cornelia Bryce Pinchot will act as chairman of the meeting. A partial list of the sponsors includes Dr. William S. Abernethy, the Rev. George A. Ackerly, Dr. Russell Clinchy, Mrs. Mordecai Ezekiel, and Dr. and Mrs. Walter Lowermilk.

New Newcomb Members Feted

The monthly business meeting of the Newcomb Club of Bethesda was a luncheon, held at the Kenwood Club yesterday, in honor of the eight new members of the year: Mrs. Lendell Conner, Mrs. Philip Schaefer, Mrs. Walter Perry, Mrs. S. H. Ingberg, Mrs. Bernard Oliver, Mrs. Jack Batham, Mrs. A. W. Moran and Mrs. Wallace Vawter.

The new members were seated with the president, Mrs. William Ross Dellett, at the head table, their places marked by white carnations tied with the yellow and white club colors. Each introduced herself with a brief personal history and drew from a concealed slip a future "office" in the Newcomb Club for herself.

Each of the 17 members who have purchased books for a literary exchange will give a short review during the year. At the last meeting Mrs. A. C. Foster reviewed "Oliver Wiswell," by Kenneth Roberts. Yesterday Mrs. L. A. Whipple discussed "One Foot in Heaven," by Hartzell Spence. Mrs. Gordon Kline is conducting the purchase and exchange of these books.

There was an exhibition of five children's dresses, made for welfare, by Mrs. H. H. Curry, Miss Lulu Bell, Mrs. William Mobley, Mrs. Clyde DeBinder and Mrs. L. A. Whipple. Mrs. Jerome Barnard is in charge of this project.

KensingtonClub Hears Hoadley

The national parks of the United States offer any kind of a vacation one can afford, Frank T. Hoadley, instructor in the English Department of American University, told members of the Kensington Woman's Club yesterday. He addressed the club's meeting at the home of Mrs. Robert L. Lewis.

Mr. Hoadley, who has spent three summers in the Western parks as a ranger, said such an outing could be of the "dude" variety with deluxe railroad and hotel accommodations, or a motor and camping trip with tent and food the only cost during a month's stay at one of the Government camp grounds.

He showed colored slides of scenes in Glacier, Yellowstone and Zion National Parks, Bryce and Grand Canyons and Mesa Verde. The national park idea started in 1871, he said, when an expeditoin was sent into Yellowstone to investigate tall stories of pioneers about geysers and a "glass mountain." The result was a decision of the Government to take over the area and preserve it for the enjoyment of the American people.

In 1916, the National Park Service was created to protect the areas from everything that would defeat this end. The rangers, whom people usually see on information service, have other duties, he explained, including fire fighting. At this season, they form patrols using snow shoes and skiis, and are on the lookout for poachers and for game in trouble.

PHANTOM DINNER—The Board of Lady Managers of the House of Mercy has issued invitations for its annual "phantom dinner." The price of one "plate" is $2, and we make exception in mentioning it because the entire amount goes to the support of the home and the "dinner" never really happens. Mrs. James M. Green, 1737 Massachusetts Avenue, is receiving the contributions and invitations are addressed as formally as though guests were really to assemble for a party.

Mrs. Smith Hempstone is president of the board and other officers are Mrs. Horatio G. Gillmor, first vice president; Mrs. Frederick A. Bradley, second vice president; Mrs. Arthur MacArthur, recording secretary; Mrs. Thomas Bradley assistant secretary; Mrs. Henry Hough, corresponding secretary; Mrs. P. Deaconess Lillian M. Deo, who is now head of the home, has been in charge of it for 38 years. Bishop James E. Freeman is president of the board of trustees.

COAST GUARD WOMEN—The League of Coast Guard Women will have a benefit luncheon Monday at the Fairfax Hotel, proceeds of which will be used for the relief fund.

Reservations are in charge of Mrs. M. J. Ryan, Mrs. A. J. Hesford and Mrs. A. G. Morrill.

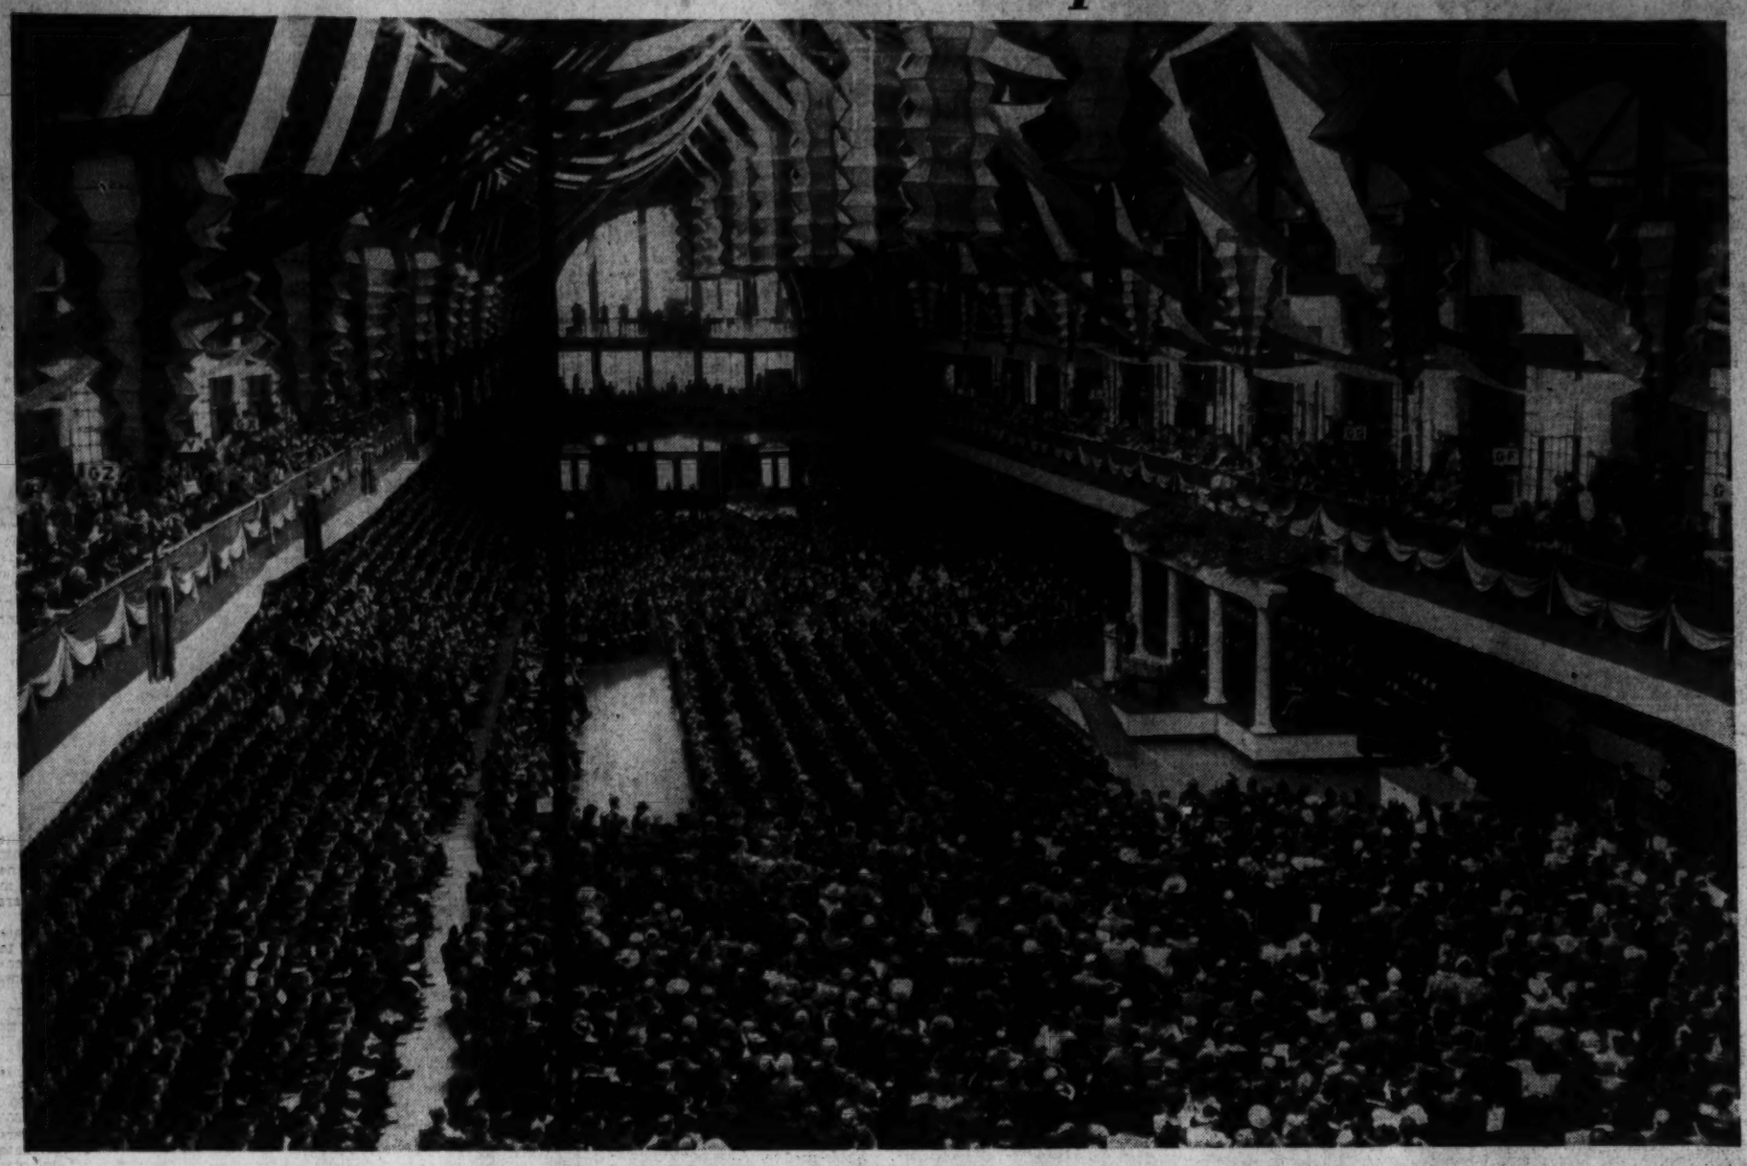
First Mid-Year Graduation at Annapolis Since World War



June in February—Moved up from the traditional week in June, the United States Naval Academy commencement packed graduating midshipmen, parents, friends and naval officials in Dahlgren Hall yesterday at Annapolis. FORWARD SPIRAL

Those who grip the sideboards at Chevy Chase Ice Palace, using their arms more than their legs to get around the rink, look wide-eyed at 10-year-old Marjorie Pennington Johnson as she glides gracefully through a Figure 8, a forward spiral, a dip and then an outside backward loop.

shells. They were Ruth Mack and Lois Dworshak, stars of the Ice-Capades, who came over from Uline to see their friend, Norval Baptie, once the world's top-ranking speed and figure skater.

But they couldn't steal Marjorie's thunder—in fact, they didn't even try to. They skated up to the 10-year-old and whirled around the ice with her.

Marjorie, who is keeping a scrapbook on all the ice shows, was thrilled to know that Miss Dworshak, too, had started to skate when she was 10. But that was out in Minnesota, and another story altogether.

Odd Jobs

Pilots Rely on Victor Kayne's 'Pealed Ear' and Perspicacity

One of the busiest men in Washington on a rainy day—and also on a lot of clear days—is Victor J. Kayne, chief tower control operator at the Washington Airport.

On an average day, he is responsible for coordinated landings and departures for 136 commercial planes, besides more than 100 private, Army and Navy planes and the Goodyear blimp.

To do this job without having three airplanes landing on the same runway or keeping commercial planes circling while a sightseeing "job" is descending, Kayne and his two assistants keep a constant ear on:

Receiving radios from each of the three airlines using the airport.

Another radio used by private, Navy and Coast Guard planes.

A fifth radio used to announce Army planes.

Telephone connections with Bolling Field, Anacostia Airport and the Weather Bureau.

Direct wire connections with the CAA offices for bad-weather altitude instructions.

And three other phones from airlines operations offices.

While listening to the steady crackle of voices over five radios and answering phones, Kayne monotones instructions over the general frequency sending radio and keeps an observant eye on wind direction and velocity gauges.

"It's very simple once you get used to it," he said yesterday as planes from three directions could be seen coming toward the glass-enclosed control tower atop the airport building.

On clear days "we can land a plane every half minute," he said. But bad weather makes things more complicated. Planes are then each allotted a specified altitude by the CAA and they must be flown in, not oftner than one every ten minutes, so that they do not collide in coming down.

Kayne has been handling the airport control tower since 1935, soon after it was erected. He had been a mechanic at the field since 1930 and was offered the job because of his ability with radios and knowledge of air rules.

He is married and has a home at 2333 King Place Northwest, where he goes after working hours until something goes wrong at the airport and he is called back again.

He is also a licensed pilot, but doesn't own a plane. "They're too darn expensive," he remarked.

Head-on Crash Injures Eight, One Critically

D. C. Fireman Badly Hurt in Beltsville Collision; Driver Held

Traffic deaths to date this year.. 13
Traffic deaths this date last year. 5
Total traffic deaths in 1940..... 79

A District of Columbia fireman is in Casualty Hospital in a critical condition, three other persons were seriously injured and four more were slightly hurt, as a result of a collision between a carload of colored laborers returning to Washington from Fort Meade and another automobile at Stewarts Curve, on the Washington-Baltimore Boulevard near Beltsville, yesterday afternoon.

The injured include Frank D. Donaldson, 34, of Beltsville, a member of No. 13 Truck Company, who suffered a fractured skull and possible internal injuries, and Dorothy Donaldson, 34, his wife, who has lacerations of the face and head, concussion of the brain and severe leg injuries. Others are Artie Howard, colored, 29, of 935 R Street Northwest, concussion of the brain and lacerated face, and Wilson Payne, colored, 41, of 57 Fenton Street Northeast, fractured clavicle, cerebral concussion, and cuts and bruises on the face.

Child Slightly Hurt

Linda Lee Donaldson, 1-year-old daughter of the injured couple, was admitted to the hospital also but her condition was said to be not serious. She has slight lacerations and bruises.

Roscoe James, colored, 45, of 393 Columbia Road Northwest, was admitted to Freedmen's Hospital later in the day and was treated for a sprained right leg and cuts about the head.

Although suffering possible fractures of the ribs and pelvis and cuts and bruises on the abdomen, Fred Wall, colored, 49, of 1402 Tenth Street Northwest, refused hospital treatment.

The driver of one of the cars, Eddie Sligh, colored, 23, of 1813 Ninth Street Northwest, was treated for minor lacerations on the head and face and later taken to the Hyattsville Jail, where he was held under a $500 bond on charge of reckless driving, preferred by State Policeman Pat Nolan.

Cars Strike Head-on

According to eyewitnesses, the two cars struck almost head-on at the curve.

Both autos were twisted out of shape by the force of the impact.

The injured persons were rushed to the hospital by two ambulances of the Branchville Rescue Squad.

In Arlington County, Va., 10-year-old Betty Ann Emerson, of 1421 North Inglewood Street, Arlington, Va., was seriously injured when she was struck by an auto at North Inglewood Street and Washington Boulevard after alighting from a school bus.

Police said Betty Ann was struck by a car driven by Mrs. Loren Pope, of East Falls Church. The child suffered a fractured skull and was treated at Emergency Hospital. Mrs. Pope was released on her personal bond, without charge.

Harold P. Johnson, 31, of New York City, was critically injured when he was struck as he stood in a safety zone at Twenty-fifth Street and Pennsylvania Avenue Northwest. He was treated at Georgetown Hospital for concussion of the brain, two broken legs, two broken arms and a fractured hip. Harold Denson, 35, of Arlington, Va., was held at the Third Precinct on a charge of reckless driving.

In another safety-zone accident, J. Stanley Lacy, 26, of 5524 Eighth Street Northwest, received undetermined injuries when he was struck at Georgia Avenue and Kennedy Street Northwest. He was treated at Emergency Hospital for leg and head injuries. Sixth Precinct police booked William A. Bailey, 40, of 700 Madison Street Northwest, on a charge of drunken driving.

Two Drivers Released on Bail; One Facing His Fourth Charge

Two motorists were at liberty under bail last night pending trials by a jury on serious traffic law violation charges.

One defendant, Moulton M. Batchelder, 42-year-old carpenter, of 617 Fifteenth Street Northeast, posted $500 bond after he pleaded not guilty to a charge of driving while drunk—the fourth accusation under the statute filed against him since 1933.

Hershel F. Gray, 26, of 1309 Concord Avenue Northwest, who told police he was a doctor, was released after putting up surety of $600 on charges of reckless driving and leaving after colliding.

Gray originally was charged with driving while drunk, hit and run, and assault on a policeman at the Sixth Precinct Thursday night. No papers were issued on the assault charge and Assistant Corporation Counsel Milton Korman, after a hearing, decided there was not sufficient evidence to support a drunk-driving count and filed the reckless driving information.

It was alleged that Gray's automobile struck that of Sally S. Wade, 1920 S Street Northwest, at Connecticut Avenue and Military Road Northwest, and left without stopping. Police arrested Gray at his home.

Batchelder was booked at the First Precinct station Thursday night. At his arraignment yesterday he pleaded innocent and demanded a jury trial.

Court records disclose he is due to appear in jury court next Friday on a similar charge which was placed against him June 23. He is on bail on that charge also.

Batchelder's traffic record shows convictions for driving while drunk in 1933 and again in 1935, police say. In 1933, the defendant also was charged with hit and run.

Edward M. Deane, of the Board of Revocations and Restorations, said Batchelder's driving permit had been revoked following the two previous convictions. In both cases, however, he stated, the permit was restored, the last time in 1937.

Youth Group Protests Aid Bill

Lend-Lease Measure Criticized at Session Of American Youth Congress Here

A "town meeting" of 500 American Youth Congress delegates and 1,500 other persons last night shouted their approval of six speakers who attacked the lend-lease bill as an instrument for ending democracy in America and taking what's left into war.

Their meeting, first of a three-day session, was held in Turner's Arena, Washington prize fight center, and several of the speakers cited this as they set up a running fire of criticism and mock courtesy for the House and Senate committee members in charge of lend-lease hearings.

Organizations sponsoring the meeting objected that their spokesman had been denied a chance to testify in the hearings on Capitol Hill. They described last night's meeting as a hearing on the bill, invited House and Senate committee members to attend, and reserved seats for them. Although none appeared, the absent Congressmen were invited several times during the program to speak.

Once with a song, and several times from the platform, the group heard reminders of their last year's gathering on the White House lawn when President Roosevelt rebuked them for a stand on foreign affairs which he said was "twaddle."

The song, which helped open the meeting, was "Why Do You Stand There In the Rain."

Mrs. Roosevelt earlier declined an invitation to address the congress, because, she said, "I am not in agreement with the attitude they have taken on foreign affairs; and I am not going to participate in this meeting because I could not do so without seeming to agree with them on something with which I do not agree."

Scattered hissing followed one mention of these three names, the President, William Knudsen, director of the Office of Production Management, and Sidney Hillman, defense labor chief. Others, mention of whose names drew the same response were Representative Dies (Democrat), of Texas, and Representative Cox (Democrat), of Georgia.

Jack McMichael, chairman of the congress, said the young people of the United States "are opposed to everything that Hitler represents," and urged this: "Don't lease or lend our lives."

Other speakers were Frederick Field, executive secretary of the American Peace Mobilization; John P. Davis, secretary of the National Negro Congress; the Rev. Owen A. Knox, chairman of the National Federation for Constitutional Liberties; Michael J. Quill, president of the Transport Workers Union, C. I. O., and Herbert Witt, executive secretary of the American Student Union.

Joseph P. Lash, member of the A. Y. C. cabinet, issued a statement saying supporters of the lend-lease bill had been given no chance to share in the program, and urged the bill's passage.

Youth Group Here To Stop 'Leftist' Unit

Seven pretty girls and nine young men stepped from a New York train at Union Station yesterday, here to "stop the junior Fifth Column"—represented, they said, by the American Youth Congress which opened sessions at Turner's Arena last night.

They carried placards attacking motives of the A. Y. C. and said they were in Washington for a "positive demonstration" with no "gimme" demands.

"We are going to show," said Murray Plavner, director of the National Foundation for American Youth, which sponsored the trip, "that American youth is behind the national defense program and has no interest in Moscow."

The youthful delegation—the oldest is 21—represent three New York colleges—N. Y. U., Columbia and Brooklyn College. Gene Tunney, former heavyweight champion, is their national chairman. They will hold no formal meetings, but plan to visit various members of Congress to assure the Administration that America's young people stand ready to support "real American ideals."

The group gleefully admitted they would try to steal the spotlight from the A. Y. C. and last night met informally at the Willard Hotel to draw up plans for today's activities.

"We don't want any special privileges," said Plavner, and his followers echoed the sentiments. "We just want to show that the American Youth Congress doesn't represent American youth."

Both the girls and young men were looking forward to any chance meetings with the so-called "left-wing" members—but promised they would not seek such a meeting.

"We'll just ignore them—give them the cold shoulder," said one of the group.

They were no little pleased at reports that Mrs. Roosevelt has refused to meet with the A. Y. C. and lauded her decision.

Military Road Bus Urged by Chillum Heights Citizens

The Chillum Heights Citizens Association last night adopted a resolution favoring the Military Road alternative for the proposed cross-town bus route. This way, the route would serve more people than it would running over Park Road, also under study, members believed.

A report from the committee on streets and sidewalks informed the association that Blair Road will soon be widened between Chillum Heights and Takoma Park. New traffic lights are to be installed on Longfellow, First and North Capitol Streets, it was announced.

Herbert Gill, of the Washington Gas Light Co., spoke on natural gas.

Morris Cafritz Reelected Head Of Boys Club

Morris Cafritz, Washington real estate man and civic worker, last night was reelected president of the Metropolitan Police Boys Club at the annual meeting at the Ambassador Hotel.

CAFRITZ

In an acceptance speech, Cafritz declared there was a need for additional boys' clubs in the various precincts. Upon the success of the $100,000 funds drive which opens next Saturday will depend whether such units are placed in operation, he added.

Others renamed were Maj. Ernest W. Brown, club founder; Dr. M. G. Gibbs, first vice president; H. Clifford Bangs, second vice president; Robert V. Fleming, treasurer; I. J. Roberts, assistant treasurer; L. Gordon Leech, secretary; James A. Councilor, comptroller, and E. H. Nick, assistant comptroller.

The following were elected to serve three-year terms on the board of directors: James Pixlee, H. Clifford Bangs, Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox, Harry P. Somerville, J. H. Ferry, Lieut. Col. Harvey L. Miller, Col. R. H. Fletcher, E. S. Pardoe, Lewis A. Payne, the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, D. D., Dr. James A. Nolan, John Saul, Edmond O. Carl, William Flather, jr., L. P. Steuart and Milton King.

Discussing the launching of the funds drive, Charles S. Dulcan, sr., campaign chairman, and Fred A. Smith, advance gifts leader, reported their committees in readiness for the drive. The Dulcan and Smith groups had held organization meetings earlier yesterday at the Ambassador Hotel and at Harvey's Restaurant, respectively.

Dulcan announced the appointment of the following division chairmen who in turn will select vice chairmen. The latter will name their team captains:

David S. Bethune, Col. E. Goring Bliss, John Dodge, J. H. Ferry, Milton S. Kronheim, Hardie Meakin, R. C. Mitchell, S. E. Mooers and Burton Langhenry, John A. Reilly, C. G. Pennington and Harry Kerr.

Couple Who Beat Infantile Paralysis Cheer Capitol as They Drop In on Their Wedding Trip

THE NEWLY WEDDED MR. AND MRS. MILLER WITH SENATOR KILGORE (CENTER)

There was laughter, sounding full of strange confidence, in the Capitol yesterday, despite the gray weather and the environment's reputation as a parade ground for those with long faces in these times.

In a long personal battle fought by Virgil Miller, 24, and Danease Miller, 23, of Beckley, W. Va., against infantile paralysis, times and weather were slight considerations. To them, consistently, was the larger problem of standing, self-sufficiently, on their own crippled legs and making a go of life for themselves, as individuals. Yesterday they arrived here on the first day of their wedding trip.

They had overcome their difficulties, individually. Virgil had found that he could open a news agency on a Beckley street, and by attentiveness to work and cheerfulness win the trade of the town's best folks.

Danease also had gone to work, tackling single-handed the proof-reading for the Beckley Post-Herald and keeping its library to boot.

They both had known each other, of course, through long-shared fighting to stand on their own feet, and on Thursday were married.

Senator Harley M. Kilgore, Democrat, one of Virgil's best customers in Beckley, showed them around here yesterday.

D. C. School Budget Held Inadequate

Ballou Points To Increased Needs at Session In Thomson Building

School Superintendent Frank W. Ballou, in an explanation of District school appropriations for fiscal 1942, last night confronted 200 citizen and Parent-Teacher Association delegates with the problem of an educational budget inadequate for steadily increasing needs.

The association members who gathered at Thomson School for the joint meeting with Board of Education officials were provided with elaborate data, showing item by item requests of school heads as contrasted with money ultimately allotted by Congress.

"The schools cannot tell the appropriating authorities what should be done about the situation of lacking funds, the superintendent asserted, adding:

"It is up to you as good Americans to take these figures back to your associations where you can discuss and act upon them."

The tables told the story of the lopping of more than $5,000,000 from the $18,346,369 requested by the board for the fiscal year starting in July, after action by Commissioners and the Budget Bureau.

Another voluminous sheaf of data told the history of board attempts to secure additional teachers, and general building and property improvements since 1933.

Exemplifying the cutting of appropriations in the 1942 District operating fund, Ballou pointed out $29,297 had been sought for improvement of school lighting while the Commissioners and Budget Bureau had slashed the sum to $10,000.

The reduction of nearly $20,000 means that it will take eight years for the schools to realize adequate lighting if no further money was forthcoming in the meantime, the official declared.

Discussing the history of requested items, Ballou pointed to cases where additional administrative officials, and teachers, repairs and other improvements had been called for year after year by the Board of Education with only infrequent cases of full compliance by Commissioners, Budget Bureau and Congress.

In concluding remarks, the superintendent pointed to a steadily increasing school enrollment in the past dozen years, interrupted by only a slight drop this year, with a far less than corresponding augmenting of school facilities.

Symphony Fund Drive Reports 37% of Its Goal

With $39,966.29, representing 37.14 per cent of the goal, raised during the first five days of canvassing, the 800 volunteer workers in the National Symphony Orchestra's eleventh annual sustaining fund will take time off at 4:30 o'clock this afternoon to attend the final hour of the orchestra's rehearsal for tomorrow's concert.

All workers in the drive have the privilege of witnessing Conductor Hans Kindler and the orchestra polish their performance of the numbers into the finished work which will be heard on tomorrow's concert. In view of the limited rehearsal time at the orchestra's disposal, it is requested that everyone planning to attend be at Constitution Hall promptly at 4:20 so that they may be seated by the time the orchestra is ready to begin its final rehearsal period.

The progress of the campaign for $107,600 to support the orchestra's eleventh season was announced at the second report luncheon yesterday noon at the Carlton Hotel. The amount raised to date—$39,966.29—is $7,318 less than that obtained during the same period in last year's drive, but, in spite of that, no pessimism about the outcome was expressed at the meeting.

4 U. S. Employes Guests Tonight On Air Program

Four Federal employes who would like to spend a week's vacation in St. Petersburg, Fla., with all expenses paid, will be guests tonight on "Your Government This Week," Government employe program that is heard over WJSV at 7:45 o'clock.

Each of the four employes has entered the Federal Employe Council-WJSV recreational contest. Two winners will be sent to the Florida resort on the Silver Meteor. Any Federal employe can enter the contest by writing a post card or letter to WJSV and telling how he spends his spare time, and what he thinks the council should do to promote recreational activity among Federal employes.

News of the week of interest to Government workers will be commented on by Jerry Klutz, editor of The Post's Federal Diary.

Washington Unable To Check Lightning Thrusts of Stars; Colvin, Ceryance Star

By Jack Munhall

The Washington Eagles, who have been losing without discrimination to different Eastern Amateur Hockey League rivals, held steadfast to their current form last night and dropped a game to a combine of three rivals at Riverside Stadium.

By the convincing count of 7-1, Washington, in full view of 2,261 paying patrons, suffered its worst defeat of the year at the hands of a team of stars from Baltimore, River Vale and New York. Atlantic City and Boston were not represented on the team because they played each other last night.

Orioles' Presence Known

Baltimore, however, was very well represented as Washington was quick to learn, for in absorbing their fifth defeat in six matches in eight days, the Eagles watched their nemeses account for four goals and seven assists.

Chick Webster, smooth center, paced the Baltimore contingent and was chosen by the D. C. Ice Hockey Writers Association to receive a trophy as "most valuable" All-Star. From Owner Severine G. Loeffler Paul Courteau got a similar trophy as "most valuable" Eagle. Courteau scored the only Washington goal and constantly was carrying the puck into Baltimore territory, although his mates could not seem to knock the disc through Baltimore's great goalie, Frank Ceryance.

Everybody Scores

The All-Stars, in their first match together, acted as an experienced and well-knit unit as attested by the fact that every player on the squad except Jack Dyte made at least one point, and their seven goals were credited to as many different players. The All-Stars recorded three goals in the first period and two each in the succeeding stanzas.

Despite the score, young Lester Colvin turned in a better-than-fair goal-minding performance for the Eagles.

The match set some sort of record by the absence of a single penalty, the officials overlooking the rare fouls. Norm Burns, Washington's league-leading scorer, was slightly gashed.

Soose Beats Vigh to Win Shot at Title

By Sid Feder

Associated Press Sports Writer.

New York, Feb. 7.—Billy Soose's long-range left won him a ten-round decision over Ernie Vigh before 10,507 fans in Madison Square Garden tonight, but the victory didn't bring with it the promised middleweight title shot for the "glamour boy" from Penn State College. Soose weighed 161; Vigh 160½.

Instead, Promoter Mike Jacobs considered the bout so close—with Soose floored once by the Newburgh, N. Y., slugger's body punches—that he announced he planned to rematch the two over the 12-round route March 7.

In a close bout the lanky boxing ace had to come off the floor to do it. A ripping left hook to the body and a short right to the head dropped him to the canvas in the eighth round and the count reached eight, with Soose on one knee as the bell rang.

Judges Favor Soose

Both judges scored the fight in favor of Soose. Referee Eddie Joseph called it five rounds for each, but gave the decision to Billy. The Associated Press score card gave Vigh, a cement-chinned slugger from Newburgh, N. Y., five rounds, four to Soose and one even.

The fight was, in effect, a long-range cannon against a submarine armed with torpedo in either hand. As long as Soose was able to stay away and poke out with his left, from his advantage of inches in reach, he was safe. When Vigh had enough of this, he'd bounce underneath and inside and tear belly with ripping rights to the ribs and lefts to the midriff.

Promoter Jacobs, who counted a gross gate of $22,699 for the show, which followed an all-day rain, had said previously the winner of tonight's tussle would be awarded a shot at Ken Overlin's middleweight title in March.

Little less than a miracle would be necessary to put Woodrow Wilson High's cagemen in the public school basketball championship play-off now, but the youthful Tigers make their exit from serious consideration without disgrace.

They gave the defending champion Roosevelt five 32 minutes of as stubborn resistance as it has had this year before bowing, 30 to 25, last night in the last half of a double-header at Tech gym. The opener went to the host club, 24 to 11, over Anacostia.

As a result the Riders of Roosevelt locked up a title tourney berth, dropping Eastern to a second-place tie with Tech in the standings.

Riders Are Checked

Squelched by Anacostia, its cellar mate, in an overtime affair earlier in the season, Wilson was scarcely recognizable last night. For three quarters it matched the best the Riders could produce, even stealing a good deal of the glory. And in the end it was its own mediocrity at the foul stripe that decided.

With approximately 2,500 fans sitting stunned and then screaming their heads off, the Tigers surprised by holding an 8-6 lead at the first quarter. In the second, they faded somewhat as a result of "pot" shots by Hymie Perlo and under-the-basket points by Frank Ciango, going on the short end of a 16-13 count.

Though Roosevelt amassed a 23-19 margin midway the third session, the score was 23-all at the end. The first 2-pointer was rung up by Charley Hardison and the second,

Despite many last-minute withdrawals because of illness and calls to Army service, the Atlantic Coast badminton championships got under way last night at Kensington Armory without any notable upsets.

Dawson's 68 Leads Texas Open Golfers

Frigid Blasts Greet Field at San Antonio; Small Fires Help Keep Players Warm; 15 Clubs Disqualify Cooper

By the Associated Press

San Antonio, Tex., Feb. 7.—Snuggled deep in an overcoat he shed during shots, Johnny Dawson, the meticulous Hollywood amateur, pulled a three-under par 68 out of a frigid wind today to lead the Texas Open tournament's first round.

Wood fires crackled at every tee and withdrawals were many as chilled players tore up cards and headed for clubhouse warmth.

Light Horse Harry Cooper withdrew when he discovered on the fifth hole that he had 15 clubs in his bag—one over the limit.

Eleven one-putt greens, on greens that were scuffed by muddied feet before he started his round, brought Dawson in one stroke ahead of his playing partner, silent Ben Hogan of White Plains, N. Y. Dawson had a 35, 33—68 and Hogan a 37, 32—69.

Dick Metz Has 70

Dick Metz, the bronzed Texan out of Oak Park, Ill., stood alone at 70 with his crisp round of 36-34.

Bunched in the par 71 bracket were Clayton Heafner, Linvill, N. C., 35-36; Ralph Guldahl, Chicago, 36-35; Byron Nelson, Toledo, National P. G. A. champion, 35-36, and Craig Wood, Mamaroneck, N. Y., 35-36.

Notched at 72 were Sam Snead, Hot Springs, Va., 35-37; E. J. Harrison, Little Rock, 37-35; John Barnum, Chicago amateur, 35-37; Phillip George, Austin, Tex., 35-37; Red Francis, Altoona, Pa., 38-34.

Bogies Get Demarest

Golden Gate Track Files Bankruptcy

By the Associated Press

San Francisco, Feb. 7.—The hard-luck $1,500,000 Golden Gate Turf Club, which opened its track in Albany a week ago, filed a petition in Federal bankruptcy court today for adjustment of its debts.

The club listed liabilities of $603,606 and assets of $1,810,698. The petition, filed in the court of Federal Judge A. F. St. Sure, would allow the club time to draw up a schedule for adjustment of its debts.

The largest creditor was listed as the trust fund of horsemen, $21,000. Other major liabilities were State unemployment tax $13,000; social security tax, $10,000; salaries, $8,000.

The bulk of liabilities was composed of a wide variety of minor debts.

Assets consisted of the track, across San Francisco Bay, valued at $1,573,833; the lease on the land set at $129,000, and $31,580 in cash.

Opening of the track, originally scheduled for December 28, was postponed repeatedly because of heavy rains.

Filing of the petition under the Federal bankruptcy laws is not a petition in bankruptcy. Rather than interfere with operation of the track, court attaches said it would prevent any attempt at a foreclosure action.

Both crowds and the track's income have fallen far below expectations. The crowd was only 4,000 yesterday, and the betting dwindled to $58,758.

6,000 Watch Rice Ace Win 50-Yard Race

Time of 6.1 Lowers Old Record by Tenth Of Second; Unknown Equals Dash Standard

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, Feb. 7.—Fred Wolcott, of Rice Institute, set a new world's record of 6.1 seconds for the 50-yard high hurdles before a crowd of 6,000 at the fourth annual Penn A. C. indoor meet at Convention Hall tonight.

The former record of 6.2 seconds was set in 1932 by Jack Keller, of Ohio State. Several had equaled Keller's record since then.

Wolcott's record was set in the finals, but the Texan also won his qualifying heat in the same time. His first time would not have been recognized as a world's mark, however, since only two timekeepers instead of the required three clocked him at 6.1 seconds.

East Equals Mark

Wolcott's brilliant race followed another great race in which Thomas East, comparatively unknown sprinter from Cheney (Pa.) State Teachers College, equaled the world's record of 5.1 seconds for the 50-yard dash in upsetting Defending Champion Norwood (Barney) Ewell, of Penn State.

East, a lanky Negro built much like Penn State's Negro star, beat Ewell by a wide margin in their qualifying heat, but less than 2 inches separated them at the finish of the final.

Walter Mehl, of Wisconsin, breasted the tape a yard ahead of John Munski, of Missouri, to win the Pennsylvania mile.

Chuck Beetham, former Ohio State runner, competing unattached, nosed out Jim Kehoe, former Maryland runner representing the Washington (D. C.) A. A., by a foot in a thrilling finish of the George Lang half mile. John Borican, of the Shore A. C., Elberon, N. J., was third.

Kehoe Takes Lead

Kehoe took the lead after the second lap and led almost to the turn of the final lap when Beetham came up strong from third place and put on a great spring to breast the tape first. Borican, who led the first two laps, was far behind at the finish.

Catholic University's 1-mile relay team made its season's debut a winning one by defeating West Chester Teachers and St. Joseph's of Philadelphia in that order in an intercollegiate contest. The Cardinal quartet of John Weschler, Joseph Street, Charles O'Keefe and Joseph Malaney was timed in 3:34.8.

Ewell made up for his defeat in the 50-yard dash by anchoring Penn

Jean Bauer Wins Palm Beach Golf Title Second Time

By the Associated Press

Palm Beach, Fla., Feb. 7.—Jean Bauer, of Providence, R. I., a veteran competitor in the winter golfing tour, won the Palm Beach women's tournament today for the second time in three years.

She took a 19-hole decision over Grace Amory, of Palm Beach, runner-up to Betty Hicks, of Long Beach, Calif., in the same event last year, and in the Miami Biltmore tourney last week.

A 15-foot putt for a birdie three brought the trophy to Miss Bauer, who rallied smartly after trailing by two holes at the turn.

Wes Ferrell Eliminates Waner In Baseball Golf Tournament

By the Associated Press

St. Petersburg, Fla., Feb. 7.—Three down at the turn, Wes Ferrell came back to shoot a spectacular 33 on the last nine and defeat his old rival, Paul Waner, 2 up, in the second round of the baseball players' golf tournament at the Jungle Club today.

It begins to look like the only way they'll ever eliminate Ferrell is to blast.

The right-hander has won it three years in a row, and his victories today advanced him to tomorrow's semifinals, where he tackles Merv Shea, coach of the Detroit Tigers.

The two other survivors of today's two match rounds were Heinie Manush, the tournament medalist, and Lloyd Brown, now pitching for the Phillies. They clash in tomorrow's other 18-holer to decide the finalists in the 36-hole play-off Sunday.

Ferrell won his morning match from Al Simmons, 7 and 6, encountering no difficulty at all with the old Athletics star slugger, who mashed a finger the night before in a door. But Waner was a different proposition in the afternoon.

Shea, who draws the thankless task of trying to stop Ferrell tomorrow, scored today over Whitey Witt, 4 and 2, and over Rick Ferrell, catching brother of Wes, 4 and 3.

Manush, manager at Greensboro, N. C., still was ailing in the back, but he turned back Johnny Murphy, of the Yankees, 1 up in 20 holes, and overwhelmed Jack Russell, now a Clearwater oil man, 6 and 5, in the afternoon.

Lloyd Brown eliminated Roger Peckinpaugh, 6 and 5, in the first round, and then subdued big Paul Derringer, 4 and 3. Brown's medal score—played out—was 73.

Everybody Worked Hard for Goals in All-Star Game

This Morning

Without Shirley Povich

(While Shirley Povich is on his vacation his column is being written by other members of The Post sports staff.)

By Bill Burnett

He didn't exactly get a kiss on each cheek as an introduction to this hobby of his, nor is that hobby quite as sedate as collecting China elephants, but Dave Keppel has certainly managed to enjoy every minute of all his 11 years as a basketball referee around town. That's why we'd like to bring him into our contribution to the Povich-shoulds-never-took-a-vacation series.

BURNETT

To look at Dave in his official capacity, striped shirt and all, you'd think he never had another thought beyond "Who is the next foul going to be on?" He's all business out there on the floor. And, leaving off the adjectives, he's as good a court marshal as the city boasts.

What really sets him apart, however, is the sense of humor that crops up with the shower room around him or when he and friends sit and swap tales. Dave can see something funny about anything then.

Take, for instance, his version a few nights ago of his induction into this officiating business.

"Believe me, this is no lie," he started off, just like he starts all his stories," I was just a kid off the sandlots when I first got on the board. I didn't know a lot about refereeing—maybe I still don't!"

"Anyway, my first game was between Georgetown freshmen and Eastern High. Things went along all right until toward the end and then the score was close. A big red-headed kid from Georgetown (I forget his name) started roughing it and wound up by pushing Eastern's little Barney Kane through a plate glass door. I called a foul on him, and his answer to that was to grab me by the shirt and tear all the buttons off. I got in one punch before the fun was stopped, knocked two of his teeth out.

"Referees aren't supposed to hit players, you know, but at the time I didn't care. I thought to hell with this stuff if you have to get buttons ripped off your shirt. I'm telling you, it took a lot of persuading by Eastern's Principal John Paul Collins to make me forget the whole thing."

Once over the first humps, Dave began to see a humorous side to almost everything happening on the court. Players, to hear him talk, were always tripping over their own feet, getting mad for silly reasons, etc, etc, and it made good material for his yarn-swapping. Now he can even get an after-game chuckle out of such incidents as one in the Roosevelt-Western game last week.

In the fourth quarter, Dave, who is on short side of 5-foot-5, was dashing down the sideline during a fast play and called "back court" on a Roosevelt player. To which one youngster in the stands, evidently a Western rooter, responded with a terse but vociferous "Good going, Mickey Mouse. That's the first one you've called right all night."

Married and holding down a good position in the District of Columbia Water Department, Dave still does more officiating than nine-tenths of the men on the local approved board. Last week he handled 22 games, and before the season is up he thinks his total will be about 175. That still won't match the $900 he earned in his first year of refereeing—1930. But speaking of 1930 forces another anecdote from Dave, this one concerning Walter Haight, The Post's pony man.

"When I was a kid I used to hang out at one of the local play grounds," he confides." Every afternoon Walter went by on his way to work, stopped to talk a while, and finally wound up in a game of basket-shooting. I'd bet him quarters I could make two 'pot shots' before he could make one, and every day I won from $1 to $2 from him."

"Finally the elderly lady who directed the playground saw Walter, who was slightly taller than I, on the premises. She also noted that we were betting on our shots. Like a mad hen she rushed out and chased Walter off the grounds with 'Don't you ever come back here again, you bad man. Shame on you for winning money from these children.'"

The main thing about refereeing, Dave says, is keeping in condition. That doesn't come hard in the winter, when each night's pastime amounts to approximately 32 trips around the block at a dead run. In the summer, however, he must turn to daily swims to keep that meticulous figure and those sturdy legs.

Condition may be important to Dave Keppel, but we'll bet that sense of humor helps out a lot.

What Interests You?

New York, Feb. 7.—BASEBALL?—Judge Landis' latest bombshell which virtually turns over to the scavenger clubs a raft of top-flight rookies in whom the big league clubs have invested untold thousands of dollars, is without parallel in sports history. However, there is nothing the big league owners can do about it, for in their well-remembered hysteria of 20 years ago they wrapped up all their ownership rights and handed them to Landis. They were so frightened that the Black Sox business would turn the stomach of the fans that they were desperate in their move to associate themselves with what was then a paragon of purity—the bench.

CONSIDINE

The judge's latest gesture prohibits a team's sending back a rookie to a minor league farm, until the other clubs in the big leagues have had a chance to pick him up for the modest waiver price. The clubs always have been able to give the rooks three trials, before losing possession of them. In other words, the Tigers' $75,000 rookie, Fred Hutchinson, who couldn't make the grade his first year up, would have gone to the Browns, or Athletics or one of those other outfits for the waiver price of $7,500. Then, if he got hot after that, and the Tigers, who spent a lot developing him, wanted to get him back, they'd have had to pay perhaps another $75,000 for him.

The Yankees are in a particularly perilous position, now that the Judge has laid down another home-made law . . . for which there is no provision in the Judge's contract with the bosses. The Yanks are in the throes of a tremendous change. They have a flock of young players coming up, after careful development on the Yankee farms, but Ed Barrow also remembers that his veterans came very close to winning the pennant last season, after a miserable start. The question Barrow must answer is: Shall I hold on to the Selkirks, Rolfes, Gomezes, etc., or shoot the works and take all the kids—for if I don't then the kids (in whom I have much money tied up) will wind up with other teams.

The Judge put the rule in, of course, to keep the rich clubs from covering up their young laborers, or putting them on ice in the minors until an established big leaguer wears out—even though the kids may be good enough to take their place in the big show and earn that top dough. The Judge also wants to help poorer clubs, who have difficulty competing with the Yanks, Tigers, Red Sox, Cubs, Reds, etc. in the original purchases of minor league talent. But at the same time he is helping a lot of cheap clubs who pose as being in the sports business and yet are soulless, coolie-labor outfits preying on their betters.

FOOTBALL?—The scramble for Elmer Layden's job as coach of Notre Dame has taken on the aspect of a stampede. Every Notre Dame gridman from Gus Dorais' time to the present is in the race, with perhaps one exception. He is Dutch Bergman, coach for 11 years of Catholic University's team. He was an all-America back for the Irish during the roughest, toughest era of American football—shortly after the World War, when the older boys came from abroad and went back to football with a new abandon. Bergman hasn't applied, but would be extremely receptive to a bid to return to his old school. He is strictly in the Notre Dame tradition . . . a fine coach, a perfect liaison between education and sports, and a great fellow. The Irish could do considerably worse . . . and no better.

BASKETBALL? This fellow Charley Davies, who coaches the Duquesne team which plays Long Island University Saturday night at the Garden, is a curiosity in the sports business. When he took over the Duquesne team in 1923, to begin a memorable record as a court coach, he had not finished high school. So after a while he reentered high school, while still a college coach, and overcome that darn geometry and all its poisonous fellow topics. Still coaching, he entered Duquense, got his B A, then went on—though by this time he had succeeded in passing his players in mental power—and got his master's degree. Now he teaches English at Duquesne as well as basketball. The thing he first looks for in a basketball player is a good, quick brain. He builds from there.

Terp Boxers Face Cards Tonight; Cagers Meet Generals

Both Teams Underdogs At Coliseum

Boxers Given Better Chance for Victory Over Experienced Catholic U. Squad

Maryland's boxing team faces the extremely difficult task of defeating Catholic U. tonight in Ritchie Coliseum at College Park to avert a double defeat. The Terp basketers meet Washington and Lee in a Southern Conference game in the opener of the twin bill at 8 o'clock but the much stronger Generals rate a triumph in advance.

The Terps also will be underdogs in the ring battle but not so outclassed as to make a tie or even a victory an impossibility. However, with six sophs in the line-up, the Maryland team apparently is facing too much Catholic U. experience to ward off a licking.

Alperstein Favored

Hotsy Alperstein, 145-pounder, who will be favored in his bout, will be the only Maryland letterman in action and the only Terp who fought last year who will be back.

Otherwise the Terp team probably will line up as follows, but Coach Mike Lombardo says nothing is definite until the boys weigh in:

135—Pat Quinn, sophomore, who never fought at all before this year.
165—Harry Butler, sophomore, who is new to the game.
175—Herb Gunther, sophomore, who is one of the best men on the team.
Heavy (195)—Leonard Rodman, sophomore, who has to commute from Baltimore to train.

Card's Line-up

Catholic U.'s more experienced array probably will consist of the following:

120—Ted Mandris.
127—Lenny Bartone.
135—Leo Gaffney.
145—Huck Hughes.
155—Jack Haskins.
165—Gerry Strang.
175—Leo Houck, jr.
Heavy—Casimir (Sneeze) Kyzcewski.

Mandris, Bartone, Gaffney and Stang are the Brookland aces and Houck is highly regarded.

Outside of Alperstein, the Cards appear to have their greatest rivals in Lincoln and Gunther, although the crafty Dorr may prove a match for Bartone.

Red Raiders Beat Devitt Prep, 42 to 25

Western's sharpshooters found the range early on their home court and turned back Devitt Prep, 42 to 25, in a fairly interesting basketball game last night.

The Red Raiders now have won seven and lost five.

The Raiders wasted no time on the invaders ad held an 11-7 advantage at the end of the first quarter. At the half, they were out in front, 18-11. A scoring rampage in the third quarter gave Western a 32-19 margin and from then on it was a breeze for the victors.

Western's Mitchell, who found the hoops for a total of 11 points, took scoring honors. Schenker, also of Western, was runner-up with 10 points. Cross scored 9 for the Raiders.

Clemmens was high scorer for Devitt with 7 points.

A Modern (250 Lb.) Marco Polo:

Haight Goes South

Miami, Fla.

Dear Boss:

I haven't written anything about my diet for some time. In fact, I have been cheating. I finally became a victim of a propaganda campaign launched by Bill Martin, Stevens' No. 1 counterman at the race track. Now Bill should know something about my appetite, having supervised my track eating for upwards of ten years. He knows my weakness for pork and beans and he used them as bait to wear me down. Well, Boss, I didn't have to go past Bill's spot at the counter in the first place, but I did like to take a glance at that menu and perhaps sniff the aroma of chicken a la king as Bill carried it to the hefty trainer on the end seat. Every time Bill saw me headed for the press box he yelled, "One order of pork and beans." I smiled him off for two weeks. Finally one day he called me over to the counter and said, "Wait a minute, Walter, I want to show you something." I tried to tear myself away from that counter. I knew what was coming. Bill reappeared with a large order of pork and beans.

HAIGHT

"Look at them luscious brown nuggets and them juicy strips, Walter," pleaded Bill, "they'll just melt in your mouth." That was the beginning of the end. I don't know yet how I got that fork in my hand. When I came to there was an empty platter and half-filled ketchup bottle in front of me. From then on I was just putty in Bill's hands.

So this morning I decided to try to keep up my weight-off schedule by visiting the fellow in the jockeys room who takes poundage off the riders. He has machines of every description for reducing. In fact, he keeps charts on the various jockeys and some of them lose a total of their riding weight in a month. For instance, Jockey Irving Anderson, who rode at 112 pounds last year, took off a total of 112 pounds in the course of 30 days. I asked this fellow what he thought he could do with me. He looked me over and said: "Let me see, you would be overweight now if you were riding three horses. I believe I can get you down in a week so you might be able to ride a two-horse entry." I looked at the steam box and the mechanical horse that acts like a broncho pony berserk and I was wondering if I could stand it. Just then one of the messengers from the press box came in and said: "Mr. Haight, there's a man from Washington looking for you and he says his name is W. W. Chambers."

That was enough for me, Boss. I told Bill about it and he laughed as he brought me a chocolate eclair. Well, Boss, for reasons best known to yourself and the auditing department, I have cut down on my night clubbing. In fact, I have found that there still are good, solid people in the world who sit around and chat in the evening. Last night I visited with the Bells, who live two floors below me, but whose downright charm made me feel like a janitor who had come up from his basement abode to fix the sink or something. Edward Bell at 64 is as active as a lively ball, despite a knock around-the-world career. Blanche Bell has poise of royalty, plus sparkling eyes and a keen sense of humor.

When Blanche talks, Edward sits and nods approval, never failing to repeat the last two words of any sentence on which she pauses. Mrs. Bell was a newspaperwoman around Ohio for years. Mr. Bell was 30 years with the telegraph and telephone companies. Both saw service in the first World War. He in the Signal Corps and she in the intelligence service. Well, Boss, I told them all about the great Haights and finally Mrs. Bell began telling me the story of Pietro and William. Pietro came to this country from Turin, Italy, when he was 12 years old. He made his way to Canton, Ohio, where he obtained a monkey and an organ and set out to make his way.

One day a youngster came along and handed a penny to Pietro's monkey. The youthful Italian tipped his hat to the boy. The two talked, or tried to talk, for Pietro knew virtually nothing of English. This was the start of a lasting friendship. When William discovered that Pietro could not go to school because he had to grind the organ, the American boy decided to become his friend's teacher. Each evening, William taught Pietro what he had learned in school that day.

In return, Pietro began to teach William about Italian. William's tutoring, plus reading, was Pietro's only education. The Italian boy finally sold his monkey and organ to become a printer's devil. He worked his way into the editorial department of the paper. The years passed but time served only to mellow the friendship of Pietro and William. Knowing Pietro had saved his money, William often asked him why he didn't take a vacation and go back to visit his relatives in Italy. Pietro's answer always was the same, "I will go some day if I become a big man."

Pietro Cuneo finally became owner and publisher of that newspaper and William McKinley was elected President of the United States. William could have made Pietro a Cabinet member, but the former organ grinder did not want the position. In fact, Pietro wanted nothing more than to sit back and smile as William left for the White House.

But President McKinley thought of a job that would suit Pietro, one that he was sure his friend would accept. He sent for Pietro. Within a week he was on the seas headed for Turin, Italy, the town he left with his worldly possessions tied in a bandana handkerchief as United States Consul Pietro Cuneo.

And I always thought that friendship began with a winner and ended with a loser.

MIAMI HAIGHT.

Ruth, Sick With Flu, Has Quiet Birthday

New York, Feb. 7 (AP).—Babe Ruth, still under the weather with a cold, spent a quiet forty-seventh birthday anniversary today and then prepared to leave with Mrs. Ruth for a visit with their daughter at North Conway, N. H.

"All I have been doing is posing for photographers and talking to newspapermen," said the Babe.

Coolidge Five Beaten, 26-24, By St. Alban's

Its sixth straight loss after winning the first three games on its schedule was suffered by an injury-ridden Calvin Coolidge High five yesterday, 26-24, at the hands of St. Albans. A pair of foul shots decided the close battle.

Throughout the first two periods Coolidge, minus regulars Ritchie Waterman, George Bartlett and Ed Dennison, was a badly beaten club. It trailed 9-4 at the quarter and 14-6 at the half. The deficit was cut to 17-14 by the end of the third period, however, and the teams matched points in the last stanza.

In winning their second game in seven starts, the Saints were led by Bill Terry, center, with 9 points. William Penn and Ralph Meiklejohn tallied 8 points apiece for the losers.

G.W. Engages Furman Five Here Tonight

After 17 days of idleness enforced by midyear exams, George Washington University's basketball team tonight renews its drive toward high Eastern court honors in a paralysis-benefit game with Furman University at Riverside Staudium.

The Colonials, boasting 11 victories in 14 games, will be decided favorites over the Southern invaders, but the Buff hardly is overconfident, since they had great difficulty in defeating the Purple, 37-36, in an early season game at Greenville, S. C.

For Bill Reinhart's George Washington team this game will be the first of a series of four tests in six days, the result of which will greatly influence the Colonials' ultimate Eastern and national ranking. After the Furman encounter the Colonials play host to Maryland's terrible Terrors Monday at Riverside, journey to Navy Wednesday and return home to meet strong West Virginia Thursday night.

With their squad in good trim, except for Eddie Amendola, the Colonials should win all of these games, provided they get by Furman which might catch the locals weighted down with their own rustiness. Charley Jones, 6-foot 4-inch sophomore, will replace Amendola in the starting G. W. lineup, the other positions being filled by standbys Joe Comer, Bobby Gilham, Matt Zunic and Lou Veltri.

Furman, which won 11 and lost as many last season, has an outstanding star in a little forward, Bill Ceccotti, who registered 14 points in the first G. W.-Purple game, and has been his team's leading scorer right along.

A preliminary game will be held at 7 p. m. between G. W. Frosh and FBI.

Since this program will benefit the Infantile Paralysis Fund, the free list has been suspended.

Swarthmore Bows, 36 to 32, To American U.

American University basketers nosed out the Swarthmore College five, 38 to 32, on the Eagles' court last night in a thriller which could have easily gone either way right up to the final whistle. It was the fourth victory of the season for the Americans, and was in the nature of a birthday present to Coach Staff Cassell.

After being deadlocked four times in the initial half, the Eagles came to life in the waning moments of the stanza and jumped into a lead which they never relinquished.

Trailing, 10 to 6, and with just three minutes of the period remaining, American launched an offensive which netted 14 points before the halfway gun. Jack Payne and elongated Bing Byham inaugurated this splurge when they dropped in a field goal apiece in quick succession to knot the count at 10-all. Bespectacled Bart Reese and Jim Hollis followed with long shots of their own, and Capt. Dutch Schulze, who played a commendable floor game throughout, hit twice to give his team a 20-to-14 margin as the half ended.

Cope Scores 18 Points

Under the leadership of Stan Cope, who was high scorer of the game with 18 points, Swarthmore came back strong in the last period, but inspired defensive play by the entire Eagle club successfully turned back each threat. Byham and Schulze collaborated on the major portion of the A. U. attack in this half, and together accounted for all but 3 of the 18 points that American collected during the period. Byham was runner-up for scoring honors of the game with a total of 14, and Schulze was a close third with 12.

Staff Cassell, who was presented with a gift from the student body during the half-time intermission, was without the service of two of his regulars last night. Bruce Etchison, a guard, was out because of illness, and Gus Frizzell, a promising frosh forward, recently resigned from school.

Sophs Win, 28-15

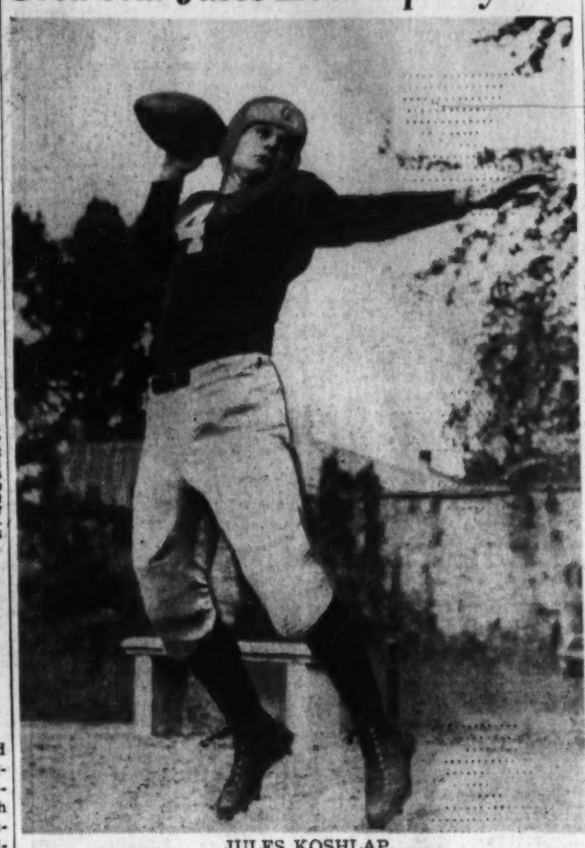
G. U. Publicity Story Says Yes, Grid Star Jules Koshlap Says No



JULES KOSHLAP

Hoya Halfback Confused by Reports He's To Report for Duty After Graduation

From the dark recesses of the Georgetown University publicity department in Ryan Gymnasium there emanated yesterday a first-class draft mystery.

It seems the publicity department is determined to get Jules Koshlap, the Hoyas' most valuable football player of 1940, into the Army as a draftee. But poor Jules doesn't know anything about it.

According to a press release, Koshlap, a 21-year-old senior halfback from Wellington, N. J., has been notified by his draft board that he has passed his physical examination and is ticketed to report to Fort Dix, N. J., after his June graduation. Embellishing the story is the note that Koshlap, who also is a draftee of the Brooklyn football Dodgers, probably will be in the Army along with his prospective boss, Owner Dan Topping of the Dodgers.

All News to Koshlap

Sympathizing with Koshlap in his misfortune that might end his pro grid career before it could begin, a reporter called him at school last night to get a statement.

"What's that," he asked. "Me in the Army? That's news to me. I filled out a questionnaire about two months ago and haven't heard anything since," the startled youngster continued.

Still confused, Koshlap went on to say that not only had he not been notified that he had passed his physical examination, but that he had never taken one.

There the mystery rests. Maybe some day the waiting world will know to just which training camp Koshlap will report in the summer—Uncle Sam's or the Brooklyn Dodgers'. And, incidentally, the G. U. publicity department might be interested to learn that Koshlap and Topping won't be together at either camp, if Julie is drafted, for Dapper Dan has been placed on the deferred list as physically unfit.

Central High Turns Back G.W., 31 to 19

Special Dispatch to The Post

Alexandria, Va., Feb. 7.—Central High School had little difficulty in repeating their earlier victory over George Washington High here tonight, grabbing an early lead and maintaining it throughout to turn back the Presidents, 31-19, before approximately 500 fans. It was the President's ninth defeat in 14 starts.

After taking a 3-0 lead, the Vikings saw the Presidents come back to deadlock the count at 3-all as the first period ended, and the count was tied again at 5-5 before the eventual winners went out in front to stay. They held a 13-7 advantage at the half, and boosted their margin to 24-11 at the three-quarter mark. Central had difficulty with George Washington's sliding zone defense in the first half, and was forced to resort principally to long shots, but in the last two periods the Vikings utilized a clever attack to work the ball into the scoring zone.

Sam Di Blasi paced Central's attack with 9 points while Lagos and Kligman helped out with 6 apiece. Marty Foltz's 5 points was high for the losers.

In a preliminary game, the crack Falmouth High girls team recorded its fifteenth straight victory by turning back the previously undefeated G. W. High sextet, 33-23. The visitors were held to an 18-15 lead at the half, but turned on the heat in the last two quarters to turn the contest into a rout.

Alice Blackburn, 6 foot 1 inch forward, turned in a dazzling scoring exhibition for the winners, and contributed 17 points to their total.

Columbus U. Boxers Meet Arkansas Tech

Columbus University's boxing team makes its second local appearance of the year tonight at Turner's Arena, meeting Arkansas Tech at 8:30.

This is the first time the Explorers have entertained their Arkansas foes, so there's not a great deal of insight into the team's ability. However, the Techmen—Arkansas State champions last year—were good enough to earn a 4-to-4 draw with Loyola of the South in New Orleans last Saturday, while Columbus was breaking even with the Citadel here.

That draw in New Orleans is of little comfort to Coach Jim McNamara, who knows what sort of ring squads they grow down in the deep bayou country.

However, the Columbus clouters ought to be in vastly better shape to entertain Arkansas Tech than they were last week against the Citadel. McNamare has been working his kids heavily for the past several days, hoping to round them into something approaching condition.

The evening's best entertainment will probably stem from a bout between featherweights, Tom Fulton, of Tech, and Louie Taub, of the Explorers. Taub tonight is meeting a game redhead who has to be slugged unconscious before he'll quit. Fulton once crawled up off the deck five times before he eventually put his opponent to sleep.

There's only one letterman on the Tech roster, one Jimmy Ferguson, who meets Bernie Jackson in the 135-pound class. Still another bout that promises to be interesting is the middleweight clash between Tech's K. O. Donoho and Frank Cuddy—whose eye, by the way, has healed sufficiently to let him box.

ADD Columbus—
115 pounds—Charlie Rohmer (Columbus) vs. Mike Diamide.
127 pounds—Lou Taub (Columbus) vs. Tom Fulton.
135 pounds—Bernie Jackson (Columbus) vs. Jimmy Ferguson.
145 pounds—Elmer Jacobson (Columbus) vs. Windy Morris.
155 pounds—Frank Cuddy (Columbus) vs. K. O. Donoho.
165 pounds—Charlie Cox (Columbus) vs. Pascal Olaviano.
175 pounds—Probably a forfeit to Columbus.
Unlimited—Ray Weir (Columbus) vs. Dick Misenheimer.

Royal Robes, Meade Up, Captures Feature Race at Hialeah

Kansas City, Big Favorite, Finishes Last

Meade Gives Victor Smart Ride to Take Photo Decision in Charity Day Event

By the Associated Press

Hialeah Park, Fla., Feb. 7.—This was the annual charity day staged by the Miami Jockey Club in the cause of Florida needy, but public choices contributed very little to the bankrolls of a groggy talent. When Herbert M. Woolf's Kansas City finished last in the featured Indian River Purse, it marked the sixth straight setback for bewildered followers of favorites. The same thing had just happened in the previous event when Fairflax trailed his field.

Joseph E. Widener's consistent Royal Robes won the Indian River by a head, thanks largely to one of Don Meade's most helpful rides. Brandon Stable's Cavalier lost the photo verdict while beating Mrs. C. H. Theiriot's Jacopus by a length and and a half for the place. Homeward Bound was fourth, four lengths in front of Kansas City, the only other starter. The latter forced the running into the stretch then stopped, the distance proving too far for him.

It rained heavily overnight and the track was deep in slop. Royal Robes ran the mile and a furlong in 1:54. She was second choice at 2 to 1. Kansas City closed at 3 to 2 odds.

Three of the Indian River starters —Cavalier, Jacopus and Kansas City —are named for the $20,000 Flamingo Stakes.

Royal Robes dominated the running. She outfooted the field with ease to open up several lengths advantage while racing Kansas City into submission. Her lead diminished in the stretch, but Meade, a master at keeping a tired horse going, held the Haste filly together just long enough. Cavalier was well placed in the running. Jacopus lacked early foot, but finished in a manner to indicate that he is approaching top form.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—VIOLANTE (field), $12.60, $7.00, $3.10; LUSTROUS, $6.10, $3.60; TRUE HEART, $2.40.

VIOLANTE, away forwardly, went in close pursuit of the pace on the outside and, responding to pressure, outlasted LUSTROUS. The latter, quickest away and hard ridden, held on well, but could not stave off the winner's bid. TRUE HEART, unruly at the gate, broke well, but was bothered slightly in the run out of the chute and bunt in the stretch drive. SALLYMAR raced evenly.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,200; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 2:33. Off 2:33½. Winner, D. A. Wood's b. or br. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—ADOLF, $19.50, $7.90, $5.20; MADISON, $5.30, $3.90; ARCHED, $3.50.

ADOLF, slow to get going, came extremely wide entering the stretch, but closed gamely and wore MADISON down in the last strides. MADISON, rated off the early pace, took command through the stretch, but was unable to withstand the winner's bid. ARCHED displayed the most speed, but faltered in the stretch run. WHA HAE, prominent in the early stages, hung under punishment in the final eighth.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—HIGHSCOPE, $61.50, $22.70, $13.90; CHARITABLE, $6.70, 4.20; SIR GIBSON, $5.00.

HIGHSCOPE, showing good speed in the going, continued with determination when the final test came to outlast CHARITABLE. The latter, in close attendance of the pace throughout, made a game effort, but Ryan outrode Pierson when it came to a drive. SIR GIBSON, outrun early, swung to the outside entering the stretch and closed with a belated rush. JOHN'S HEIR moved up stoutly between the leaders entering the stretch, but was blocked by DOUBLE B.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,300; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:35. Off 3:35½. Winner, H. M. Babylon's, b. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BECOMLY, $14.50, $4.80, $4.00; REMOTE CONTROL, $3.90, $3.00; LIBERCAISE, $4.70.

BECOMLY, at home in the going, drew clear rounding the turn, continued gamely under pressure and held her opposition safe at the end. REMOTE CONTROL, crowded back in the opening furlong, gained steadily on the outside and wore LIBERCAISE down in the final drive. LIBERCAISE stipped through on the inside the last half mile and made a game effort, but could not set up. SEVENTH DAY retired in the stretch run.

FIFTH RACE—Seven furlongs (chute). Purse, $1,400; allowances. For 4-year-olds and upward. The Everglades Purse. Start good from gate. Won handily; place driving. Went to post 4:02. Off 4:02½. Winner, J. B. Campbell's ch. g. (4), by Pompey—Pola N. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $1,000; second, $250; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:26.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MINEE-MO, $8.00, $4.10, $3.20; WOODVALE LASS, $5.00, $3.20; PLAY HOUSE, $2.90.

MINEE-MO, suited by the footing, drew clear in the opening furlong, set a steady pace while saving ground and always held his opposition safe. WOODVALE LASS moved up stoutly rounding the turn, but never seriously threatened the winner. PLAY HOUSE finished stoutly under strong pressure and held the remainder safe. BOW LOW and FAIRPLAX did not run as if partial to the going.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,400; allowances. For 3-year-olds. The Indian River. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:35. Off 4:36. Winner, J. E. Two-dollar mutuels paid—ROYAL ROBES, $6.00, $3.50, $2.90; CAVALIER, $4.30, $3.00; JACOPUS, $4.00.

ROYAL ROBES held the field safe for speed and was rated in front under stout restraint, but faltered through the stretch and just lasted under vigorous ride. CAVALIER gradually bettered his position on the outside in the last 3 furlongs and would have won in a few more strides. JACOPUS finished stoutly to hold HOMEWARD BOUND safe. The latter, slow to get going, closed a big gap. KANSAS CITY stopped badly in the final eighth and did not seem to relish the footing.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,200; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won ridden out; place driving. Went to post 5:00. Off 5:03. Winner, P. L. Two-dollar mutuels paid—PRINCE DEREK, $23.20, $7.90, $5.40; QUARDMA, $15.70, $9.00; STURDY DUKE, $7.50.

PRINCE DEREK, saving ground until midway around the lower turn, moved up determinedly when placed to pressure and shook off QUARDMA after a mild drive. The latter, a factor throughout, took command entering the stretch, but was not equal to the winner. STURDY DUKE, permitted to trail in the early stages, closed a big gap in the final 3 furlongs. SNOW sulked in spots. ALLMAR slipped and lost his rider on the stretch turn.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,200; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:31. Off 5:31½. Winner, Mrs. C. Butler's sr. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—WEST SEA, $23.10, $8.40, $6.50; PATSEY BEGONE, $4.70, $4.30; CORNWALLIS, $5.30.

WEST SEA, slow to begin, improved his position gradually under intelligent handling, caught PATSEY BEGONE tiring inside the final furlong and won going away. PATSEY BEGONE was rated in the early stages, took command in the stretch and had no excuses. CORNWALLIS showed plenty of speed, but tired under pressure. NOODLES ran a fair race.

Larbot Yacht Heavy Choice

By the Associated Press

Miami, Fla., Feb. 7.—William Labrot's Stormy Weather was an overwhelming favorite today to defeat four other yachts in the first test of the annual winter yachting series, the Sir Thomas Lipton Challenge Cup race, tomorrow.

Stormy Weather, a 54-foot yawl that once captured the transatlantic race to Norway, was highly rated in prerace speculation. Henry Fownes' Escapade and Robert W. Johnson's Good News will not compete.

Should heavy weather prevail, yachtsmen said the chances of Dudley Sharp's Gulf Stream, a 70-foot yawl flying the burgee of the Texas Corinthian Club, might be considerably increased.

The 54-foot yawl Belisarius, under charter to the Off-Soundings Club, of Springfield, Mass., rounded out the field.

Selections at Hialeah Park

Dear Al:

Col. Edward Riley Bradley's Bimelech, acknowledged leader of Hialeah turf colony, continues to train cleverly with the $50,000 added Widener on March 1 as his objective. The son of Black Toney breezed 1¼ miles over a rain-soaked surface yesterday morning in the fractional time of 0:51, 1:17 2-5, 1:44 1-5, 1:57 and 2:10 2-5. Greentree Stable's Hash, another ranking handicap performer last year, was sent a slow mile and a furlong as part of his training for the Widener. Hash's workout was tabbed in 0:54, 1:22, 1:51 and 2:04. This was also in mud. Trainer Dan MacEarchern of Mrs. Marie Evans' Shot Put, America's distance-running champion last year, stated that Shot Put would no doubt make his 1941 debut in the $10,000 added McLennan Handicap to be run Saturday, February 15. Len Carver, Maryland thoroughbred owner and head of a large horse-vanning business, arrived for a short vacation, while Joseph B. Boyle, general manager of Bowie and Marlboro, departed this afternoon for his home in Baltimore. A Del Laporta purchased Adehala, brown 3-year-old filly by St. Brideaux—Bonus, from the Greentree Stable. Adehala won the fourth race last Monday. John Gaver acted for the Greentree Stable, and the terms were private. Jockey Eddie Connelly, who was injured in a spill from Hal Price Headley's Starlike January 14, will return to the saddle next week. Lee Hardy, former rider, who is racing a small stable, was taken ill Thursday afternoon. He was removed to his home suffering from an infected wisdom tooth. BILL.

First race—PAL has never faced the barrier, but the Louchheim youngster has worked swiftly and needs only the right handling. AT LIBERTY, beaten a nose by Zo Zo, will prove a stout factor. WALLINGFORD, under the handling of Eddie Arcaro, may turn in a good performance.

Second race—BROAD VISION was shuffled back and Meade forced to take up in her last outing. The mare drops in class and should click here. SAVITAR, second back of Perlette, was never better and rates the chief contender. BAILIWICK is an honest old plater, and, over a muddy oval, he may spilt the pair.

Third race—BAY CARSE and Wendell Eads should gather in the heavy money in this event. Both won recently over a muddy course. WATCH OVER has started four times here and on each occasion has given a good account of himself. Seems the one to beat. KING'S BLUE drops much weight and seems best of the others.

Fourth race—WHIRLAWAY makes his first start since he won the Walden at Pimlico. Has plenty of class and connections report him ready for the question. CLARKSVILLE was a short margin back of Unquote. Ran well in mud and appears the logical contender. BLUE TWINK was shuffled back in last race, but previous to that turned in a clever effort.

Fifth race—EXARCH, a fleet, but faint-hearted sprinter, gave Equistone a stiff battle last week. Should find conditions to his fancy and the price may be right. DAY OFF, a three-star mudder, worked six furlongs in 1:13 and the hustling Don Meade will ride. LIBERTY FRANC, a good winner recently, may come right back.

Sixth race—SWEET WILLOW walked away from a splendid field in her debut. Picks up only one additional pound and must give her the edge. UNERRING, a winner over Pretty Pet, runs coupled with SILVESTRA and RIFTED CLOUDS and this trio figures close up. MONTSIN, an excellent mudder, has worked in excellent style recently.

Seventh race—BROWN BEN came from behind to win in fast time over good platers, runs well in mud and the sensational McCreary will ride. NAVARIN, in the hands of a clever conditioner, failed to run his race last outing. Mud improves this one. HALLIE, a nose back of English Harry, will prove dangerous under his light weight.

Eighth race—WEEKLY STIPEND is back in winning form. Won last over first-class platers and takes off few pounds. Is rated three-star mudder. YES OR NO was beaten a nose after encountering plenty of trouble. The Greentree Stable colt has a smattering of class. MISS B. B. trounced good field here in mud and the mare should give good account of herself.

Best bet—WHIRLAWAY.

New York Cotton

New York, Feb. 7 (AP).—Cotton futures dipped at the outset today and stayed down the balance of the session. Final prices were unchanged to 3 points lower.

Trade buying furnished the chief support. Offerings consisted of southern hedges, liquidation in March and selling by Bombay.

The Bombay interest locally was estimated in the trade to have dropped sharply in recent weeks. Long holdings were figured at between 1,000,000 and 1,500,000 bales, mostly in July and October. Most of the Bombay operations are designed to take advantage of price differences between New York and the Indian market.

Worth Street textile brokers reported relatively slow buying but the price undertone remained strong. Premiums were again obtained for spot delivery of cotton goods.

Exports Thursday 6,115 bales; season so far 700,505. Port receipts 20,798. Port stocks 3,472,743.

Wheat Shakes Off Weakness, Ends Higher

Chicago, Feb. 7.—The wheat market shook off early weakness inspired by a dip in securities and very optimistic crop reports and rallied to close fractionally higher today.

Early losses of as much as ⅝ cent were erased in a rally of about a cent and prices closed ⅛@½ higher than yesterday, May 82¼@82⅝, July 76⅞@77.

Traders attributed the rally to short covering and buying credited to mills, with some of the support possibly associated with Army flour orders or subsidized exports to Mexico, West Indies or Latin America. Portugal was reported in the export market for about 750,000 bushels of Canadian or United States wheat. A moderate comeback in securities later in the day helped the wheat recovery.

Corn closed ⅛@⅜ up, May, 62@61⅞, July 61⅞; oats ⅛ off to ⅛ up; soybeans ⅜@¾ higher; rye ½@⅞ up and lard unchanged to 2 higher.

The Robinson Elevator Co., Kansas City, issued a report which expressed belief Kansas' crop prospect is the best in a decade, with probably 12,500,000 acres expected to emerge in excellent condition this spring.

The Government agency announced acceptance of bids for export of 150,000 bushels of wheat to Mexico and indicated more business pending.

Nets of 201 Firms Up 18% During Year

By the Associated Press

New York, Feb. 7.—The steel makers led American business to an 18 per cent increase in profits in 1940, a compilation of corporate earnings indicated today.

Profits of the first 201 companies to report totaled $1,228,006,000 compared with $858,043,000 in 1939. Eighteen steel companies included in the compilation accounted for nearly three-fourths of the gain shown by the entire 200 corporations. These early reports, of course, include chiefly large corporations, and may indicate a larger gain than corporate profits generally showed.

While not enough companies have reported in many industries to afford adequate comparisons, here's how they stack up at the present moment (000 omitted):

Colorado Chemical Firm Plans Merger

New York, Feb. 7 (AP).—A special meeting of stockholders of Union Potash & Chemical Co., a Colorado corporation, has been called for March 11 in Denver to act on a proposed merger with International Agricultural Corporation.

International owns 94.89 per cent of the outstanding preferred stock and 55.86 per cent of the common stock of Union Potash. In the event of favorable action at Denver, a special meeting of International's stockholders would be called to approve the agreement.

The new name of the companies would be International Minerals & Chemical Corporation. International is the country's largest producer of phosphates for fertilizer and its combination with Union would assure adequate sources of supply for two of the three basic raw materials required.

C.&O. Saved $5,000,000 By Competitive Bidding

Cleveland, Feb. 7 (AP).—Otis & Co., Cleveland investment firm, asserted today Chesapeake & Ohio Co. "effected savings of more than $5,000,000" Wednesday by "inviting competition for its current refunding issue."

In a telegram which it said was sent to Chairman Joseph B. Eastman of the Interstate Commerce Commission, Otis & Co. cited this as "final proof that competitive bidding for railroad securities is imperative for the protection of investors and the public."

New York, Feb. 7 (AP).—The capital market rolled along at a good rate during the week ended yesterday, public offerings of new securities increasing to $84,748,125, compared with $62,358,973 the week before.

The total included a wide variety of offerings, but demand for new money continued at a low ebb. New capital, both corporate and municipal, accounted for only 7 per cent of the total. The remainder represented refunding of existing obligations.

Stocks Slip Lower in Sluggish Deals; Minor Rally Stiffens List at Close

New York, Feb. 7.—The general direction of stocks was downward in today's market although there were scattered exceptions. Leaders slipped fractions to a point or so in early dealings but prices stiffened in the final hour and weakness, on the whole, was rare. Steels, rails, coppers and aircrafts ended under water while motors and an assortment of specialties managed to emerge with modest advances.

Lightness of offerings was one of the negatively encouraging features of the session. Volume of 341,100 shares was the smallest for a full session since September 16 and compared with 422,830 yesterday when trends were irregularly higher. The Associated Press average of 60 stocks was off .2 of a point at 42.2.

Tending to chill potential buyers, brokers said, were growing fears of corporation profits being hard hit by mounting taxes. Confirmation of this was found in the statements of Du Pont, General Motors and others. In addition, indications that labor difficulties might confront industry on its recovery swing were said to have been a bit depressing. The call for a strike vote by railway unions whose demands for vacations with pay were rejected was a case in point.

Far from cheering also was announcement of the sale of a stock exchange seat for $26,000, a drop of $2,000 from the last previous transaction and a new low since 1898.

A little support came in at the last when the President disclosed that Congress might be asked to authorize big public works or projects for inauguration when defense employment begins to wane. Motors were propped by an upturn in this week's automotive output and reports January sales of new cars were sharply above those of the like 1940 month. Helpful also were reports of further expansion in retail spending throughout the Nation.

In the losing column were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Santa Fe, N. Y. Central, American Telephone, Kennecott, American Smelting, Allied Chemical, General Electric, Du Pont, American Can, Douglas Aircraft, International Harvester and Montgomery Ward.

Bath Iron Works responded to unexpectedly good earnings figures with a gain of 1⅝ at 23¾. Lesser advances were registered for General Motors, Chrysler, U. S. Rubber, Westinghouse, Union Carbide, Loft, Western Union and Sears Roebuck.

Carrier loans led the bond department on an uneven retreat. Commodities were mixed. Wheat at Chicago was up ¼ to ½ of a cent a bushel and corn ahead ⅛ to ⅜. Cotton was unchanged to off 15 cents a bale.

In a ragged Curb losses were posted for American Cyanamid "B," Electric Bond & Share, Creole Petroleum, Midvale, Sherwin Williams and Republic Aviation. Among the few gainers were Lake Shore, Great Northern Paper and Novadel-Agene.

Transfers in the Curb approximated 82,000 against 77,000 yesterday.

Auto Industry Economizes on Defense Metals

By the Associated Press

Detroit, Feb. 7.—Paul G. Hoffman, vice president of the passenger car division of the Automobile Manufacturers Association, disclosed today that the car makers have well advanced a study of metals the industry can make available to munitions production by the utilization of alternate materials in motorcar construction.

Such a survey was requested by the Office of Production Management, which requested that the savings of certain metals be put into effect as soon as model changes are made.

While the survey is not yet complete, Hoffman said, "it is now possible to forecast release of very large quantities of special metals without delay, by voluntary action of the individual companies."

He added that the production changes that will be required "should be expected to occur without affecting performance, durability or appearance of the vehicles, unless in fact they yield improvements."

Because of the needs of the defense program, the automobile companies already have taken their regular motor vehicle departments out of the machine tool market "until further notice."

Week's Auto Output Gains

Detroit, Feb. 7 (AP).—Ward's Reports, Inc., today estimated output of the motorcar factories this week at "upwards of 125,000 units." Last week's production was 124,000. This week a year ago 95,985 units were completed.

Ward's said that plants in the automobile industry closed this week a total of $31,600,000 in defense awards.

Nash Sales Spurt

Detroit, Feb. 7 (AP).—Nash Motors reported today that its new car sales during January totaled 6,240 units, compared with 3,561 for the same month a year ago.

Sales for the final ten days of last month were 2,375, compared with 1,001 in the same period a year ago.

Steel Mill to Get Giant Freight Car

Greenville, Pa., Feb. 7 (AP).—A giant, sway-back flat car, described as the world's largest railroad car, has been constructed by the Greenville Steel Car Co. for use in national defense production.

Designed for interplant shipment of huge ingot-mold molds used in armor plate production in the Pittsburgh mills of Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corporation, the car is 90 feet long, weighs 314,000 pounds and is capable of carrying a load of 527,000 pounds. The average railroad car is about a third as long, weighs 38,000 pounds and has a capacity of 98,000 pounds.

Eastern Beats Gonzaga, 29-24

White Tide Avenges Earlier Season Loss; Gonzaga Holds Edge At Intermission, 11-9

One of two stains on its record this season was at least partially wiped out by Eastern High's cage team yesterday when it tripped Gonzaga's potent forces, 29-24, on the Lincoln Park floor. In an earlier battle the White Tide had finished up on the short end of a 30-28 count.

After trailing much of the time, the Tide chalked up its eleventh victory and issued Gonzaga its fourth loss in 14 games when it held the Purple scoreless in the last quarter and rang up 8 points of its own.

A low-scoring first half, during which the lead changed hands numerous times, saw Gonzaga emerge with an 11-9 edge. Fast scoring in the third session pushed the count to 24-21, Gonzaga, going into the last session. Then came the Tide's big effort, led by Ritchie Poston, Moe Schulman and Neil Craig.

Accountable in some degree for the losers' inability to hit the point column in the last period was the ejection of Franny Counselman, their "gun," from play on personal fouls. In his absence an all-Metropolitan star, Bob Mulvihill, went ahead to take scoring honors with 9 points. Poston also had 9 for Eastern.

Mount Rainier Beats Training Five, 37 to 27

Mount Rainier High School triumphed over National Training School, 37 to 27, yesterday on the Mounts' court.

The winners overcame a 7-6 first-quarter lead and at halftime held sway, 16 to 9.

The Trainers had difficulty in solving the Mount Rainier's zone defense.

Ludwig Rodriguez, with 15 points, led the home club scoring. Bob Seipp tallied 13 points for the losers.

Former Irish Ace Sure He Won't Get Grid Job

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

Don Miller, one of Notre Dame's famed "Four Horsemen" of another day, regards himself quizzically as he prepares for a workout in a Cleveland athletic club. He said recently that he's sure he won't get the job. Miller is an attorney and gave up football coaching in 1933 with no previous practice together, the All-Stars outclassed the Eagles in the opening period to take a 3-0 lead.

At that, though, Washington was improved over its recent matches and only fine work by Goalie Ceryance prevented at least two Eagle tallies. On the whole, Washington's teamwork was good in face of the All-Stars' great defense, but twice Corteau muffed easy shots after the puck had been worked all the way up the ice.

The match lacked almost all the roughness of the usual league game, but more than compensated for that by producing excellent hockey; fast passing and sure shooting and close checking.

May, Moe and McGregor scored the All-Stars' three goals in the period, Moe's unassisted and the other two registered after swift charges by the speedy invaders who were skating rings around MacKenzie's team.

Despite a rejuvenated attack and great goal tending by Colvin, the Eagles were unable in the second period to bite into the All-Stars' lead. As a matter of fact, they fell behind by another goal as the smart-clicking visitors tallied twice in the last four minutes of the session.

With goals by Vitarelli, unassisted, and Riley, assisted by Dotten, the All-Stars more than nullified a sensational counter by Courteau, who ended Ceryance's hopes for a shut-out, at 6:04, when he marked one up on a shot released from a position behind the Stars' net. The disc bounced in off the stick of Ceryance. In somewhat similar fashion did the persistent little Vitarelli score. He darted in between McTeer and Knipfel as they passed the puck around before the Washington goal attempting to find an opening in the solid enemy defense, and slipped it through Colvin.

Colvin Sparkles

Colvin, however, previously had sparkled in the nets, stopping one drive after another in even more spectacular form than Ceryance, who twice made almost impossible checks of charges by Washington players. Colvin seemed to have more arms than an octopus as he stretched here and there to knock down an endless barrage of shots.

Rival Sunshine States Seek Best Baseball Golfer

By the Associated Press

Long Beach, Calif., Feb. 7.—Southern California wants to pit its best golfer among the baseball players with the best in Florida.

The Long Beach Press-Telegram sent a message today to the Jungle Golf Club in St. Petersburg, Fla., offering to post a trophy for the winner of a cross-country telegraphic match between this section's champion and the winner of the event staged each year for the ball players in Florida.

Fern Bell, outfielder now with St. Paul, in the American Association, is the southern California choice. Bell won a baseball players' tournament here last fall, defeating Bill Knickerbocker, 2 and 1. His medal was 71.

It was proposed to have the two rivals play on courses as nearly alike as possible.

Moorestown Barely Beats Friends, 20-19

A foul shot by Wilson Greenwood in the waning minutes of the contest gave Moorestown, N. J., High School a 20-to-19 victory over Sidwell Friends yesterday on the latter's court.

The out-of-town club took an early lead, but not more than four points separated the pair throughout. The hosts were on the short end of a 7-to-6 count at the conclusion of the initial stanza. At half-time Moorestown was ahead, 12 to 8, and the third-period score was 19 to 15, Moorestown.

Brewers Whip FavoredClipper Five, 41 to 29

Baltimore, Feb. 7.—The surprising Washington Brewers exhibited their best form of the season against the favored Baltimore Clippers here tonight as they won an American Basketball League game, 41 to 29.

The Clippers, twice an upset conqueror of the Philadelphia Sphas recently, simply failed to match the all-around brilliance of the Washingtonians who outclassed the host club in every department.

Although Mike Bloom, former Brewer center, set the scoring pace for both clubs with 12 points, both Washington's Phil Rabin and Nat Frankel pressed him closely with 11 and 10 points, respectively.

St. John's Five Loses, 37-24, To W.-L. High

Paced by the accurate basket finding of Guard Hurst, Washington-Lee High School of Arlington, defeated St. John's of Washington, 37-24, on the Arlington court last night.

The little Generals got away to an early lead and held a comfortable margin throughout the game. The winners were out in front, 22-9, at halftime.

Hurst found himself with a hot hand and came off the floor with a total of 15 points for the night's scoring honors. Seven times he looped in field goals.

Roosevelt, Tech Win High Games

Missed Foul Shots Hurt

For one minute of the last period the only act of importance was the waving of Jack Davies, Wilson guard, out on personals. Then Perlo and Charley Howard rushed in to tally a basket apiece, and that was the end. For six minutes both teams went scoreless until Perlo and Ciango wound up scoring for Roosevelt and Hardison dropped one for Wilson.

Eight missed charity tosses hurt the Tigers, as they sank only one. Roosevelt had four 1-pointers in 14 chances. Perlo's 11 points was tops for the winners, who also profited by Wilson's loss of Freddy Vinson via the foul route late in the game.

Tech, in putting Anacostia in the same hopeless position as Wilson in the standings, looked something less than terrific. It held advantages of 5-4 and 12-7 after the first two periods, upped it to 24-10 as the Indians were held to three points in the third session, and then was a party to the strangest fourth quarter the series has seen.

Exactly one point was the total chalked up by both clubs, and Anacostia got it. Knute Peterson, after his mates had missed five foul tosses and the Maroons has missed two, dropped the lonely point with 16 seconds of the game left.

Eddie Barton and Jackie Walsh, with eight and seven points, respectively, were point leaders for the Trainers. They played only half the game, however, a second team seeing most of the action in the second half.

Ike White, 'Sherlock Holmes' Of N.Y. Newsdom, Seriously Ill

By Scott Hershey

Associated Press Staff Writer

New York, Feb. 7.—Ike White, who has lived a saga during his years of hell-for-leather racing against danger and deadlines, is seriously ill of uremic poisoning in Northwestern Westchester Hospital.

White, now 76, was one of the most famous criminal investigators in journalistic history. He was the famous "White, of The World," who came to New York from Buffalo at the age of 20 in 1885 and became an almost legendary figure.

Some old-timers like to compare him with Sherlock Holmes, saying he was the closest thing to Holmes that New York ever had. But primarily he was a newspaperman.

Isaac Deforest White (his full name, which few people knew) specialized in solving mysteries ahead of the police and, sometimes, before they even suspected that a crime had been committed.

It was White who brought the mighty and terrible "Liverpool Jack" Fitzpatrick to book.

He solved the Russell Sage bombing with only a pants button and a remnant of cloth as clues.

He went into the blizzard-swept wilds of Canada to rescue a girl from the Blackfeet Indians.

He was arrested for starting a revolution in Yucatan.

He led an expedition that set free the white slaves of the Chesapeake pirates after the governments of Maryland and the United States had failed.

He also was instrumental in reforming the prison system of New York.

White, like many another reporter, always planned to write a book about these things, but he never did.

He stayed with the World until it reached its end ten years ago. In recent years he has lived quietly in suburban Stanwood, Mount Kisco, at the home of a sister-in-law.

There, until he suffered a stroke recently, he gathered firewood each day, and remembered.

The Lend-Lease, on Aid-to-Britain Bill, one of the most important pieces of legislation ever set before a Congress, is to be the timely subject of CBS's "Report to the Nation" today. Heard over WJSV at 6 p. m., the dramatization will trace the history of the bill and probe its immediate and long-range implications both to the United States and Great Britain. Albert Warner and John Charles Daly will, as usual, serve as narrators.

What this country has to offer its alien visitors and how they may enjoy the United States to the fullest advantage is to be related by two famous authors in a special program called "Good Guests of America," to be heard over WJSV at 10:15 p. m. The speakers are W. H. Auden, the British poet, and Jan Struther, the English novelist, who has written the best seller, "Mrs. Miniver." Presented under auspices of the Department of Justice, "Good Guests of America" is an extension of the recent series on the Columbia network which early this winter presented Thomas Mann, Charles Boyer, Charles Laughton and Ignace Jan Paderewski in talks to further alien registration.

Leopold Stokowski, the celebrated conductor, is to direct the new 80-piece Los Angeles Youth Orchestra, in a special coast-to-coast broadcast over CBS which can be heard over WJSV from 3 to 3:55 p. m. This is a new link in the chain of NYA orchestras throughout the country which you've been hearing over CBS during the past several weeks.

Contract Bridge

"There's no such bid," says the gentleman on one side of the table as he marks down 1,400 for the dastardly opponents—and then the battle is on. Due to the industry of our New England bridge champion, such "impossible" bids have been redesigned for new and useful purposes. No more need the shudderings and groanings take place but in spite of this hard work and inventiveness we fancy they still will.

"Consider the no-trump responses; most players use a strong no-trump today, and a two-no-trump response is considered forcing to game.

"Why not put it to use? For example, use two no-trump over one no-trump as a request to partner, asking him to bid a four-card major if he has one. Then the responder, if he has four cards in the same major, can bid four hearts or four spades instead of the more risky no-trump contract. That brings up the following sequence, which sounds pretty foolish:

South	West	North	East
1 NT	Pass	2 NT	Pass
3 NT	Pass	4 ♠	Pass
Pass	Pass

"But why not? Responder had:

♠ K Q 8 5 3 2
♡ K J 5 3

"If his partner showed a four-card heart suit, he would play it in hearts. But when his partner chose to bid three no-trump, thus denying a four-card major, he simply bid four spades, secure in the knowledge that he had found the best suit for the hand.

Green to Present 'Racket' Cases To A. F. L. Council

William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, said yesterday that he personally would lay before the organization's executive council next week the cases of some federation officials who have been accused of "racketeering."

Green called on President Roosevelt at the White House before leaving for Miami, Fla., where the council meets Monday.

Racketeering did not figure in the White House call, Green said, adding that he saw the President to renew the federation's pledge of support of the Administration's foreign policy, and to discuss the problem of employment after the present emergency is over.

Knox Links World's Fate To Sea Power

By the Associated Press

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 7.—Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox told Naval Academy graduates today that "control of the high seas will determine the next century's history" and forecast "a slave world subject to the imperial will of ruthless dictators" if this control should pass "to those who support the totalitarian theory of government."

In the "shadow of another irreconcilable world conflict," he said, the 396 graduates must accept the responsibility of "contributing your all, if need be, to the defense of your liberties."

The Navy official spoke in historic Dahlgren Hall, where members of the Midshipman regiment, their relatives and friends and high-ranking naval officers witnessed the first midyear graduation under the new speed-up defense program.

Knox asserted the wars in Europe and Asia lie "between those who would make every human being the chattel of the State, with no rights which the State is bound to respect, and those who would maintain the principal of individual liberty, with the State as the servant of the free men who create it and maintain it."

"We unavoidably play a part with those who fight for democracy," he continued. "However, if democracy is to survive, it must exact responsibilities. One of these ... is the responsibility of contributing your all, if need be, to the defense of your liberties. To the right-thinking young man, this is not only a responsibility, but it is a high privilege."

He called sea control "vital," and declared that "if that sea power is exercised by those who believe in the democratic form, the world will be free. If, on the other hand, control of the seas passes to those who support the totalitarian theory of government, the world will be a slave world, subject to the imperial will of ruthless dictators."

Emphasizing the defense program, graduation week was carried out minus many of the traditional, colorful ceremonies of other years. One tradition prevailing at today's service was the resounding cheer by the regiment "for those about to leave" and the reply of the graduates for "those we leave behind."

As the last cheer died, 396 midshipmen's caps went sailing into the air and spectators scrambled among the seats and in the aisles for the souvenirs.

Of the graduates, 341 will be commissioned ensigns in the Navy and 26 will become second lieutenants in the Marine Corps. Others will be assigned to the armed forces or honorably discharged when their physical status is determined.

Capital Dance Group to Present Sunday Programs

Devoted to original choreographic compositions of contemporary significence, the Washington Dance Association will present this season a series of four Sunday evening programs in the Dance Playhouse, 1742 Church Street, on February 9, March 9, April 6 and May 11.

The opening program includes a new three-part suite, "Solitude," danced by Evelyn Davis and the group; "Salutation," danced by Elizabeth Burtner and Jerry Ross; "Farewell to Arms," danced by Evelyn Davis, Jerry Ross, Elizabeth Burtner, Priscilla Howe and Lucy Petta; and "Women of Destiny," a series of solo dances satirizing famous figures, such as Lucrezia Borgia, Queen Elizabeth, Mme. Du Barry, Susan B. Anthony, Hetty Green and Peggy O'Neill.

Elizabeth Burtner is president of the association, Gwendolyn Drew vice president, Mary Hopper, treasurer and Mary Taylor, secretary.

Special matinee prices will prevail this afternoon, with 1,000 seats available at 85c and 1,500 seats ready at $1.10. Tonight the 1,000 seats will remain at the standard $1.10 price.

The "Ice-Capades" features the sensational skating of Belita, beauteous English blonde star; Vera Hruba, Czecho-Slovakian star, and Lois Dworshak, "rhythm girl of the ice," in addition to the comedy antics of Eric Waite, Al Surrette, Joe Jackson, jr., and the brilliant team of Bernie Lynam and Bernie Jackson. Pierre Benoit, Rona and Cliff Thaell, Dench and Stewart, McGowan and Mack, Robin Lee and a chorus of 36 complete the cast of 75.

Author Attends Senate Hearing, Reports Notes Lost

Dr. Walter M. Kraus, New York author and economist, last night reported a copy of his "World Revitalization Plan" together with valuable notes were missing after his attendance yesterday at a session of the Senate Foreign Affairs Committee.

The plan, he said, is designed to adjust the world's economic disorders resulting from the present war. He had come to Washington for the hearings on the "lend-lease" bill.

Dr. Kraus said he last saw the manila envelope containing his papers when he placed it beside his chair which he left for a moment to get a copy of one of the speeches read before the committee. While in Washington Dr. Kraus is staying at 1722 N Street Northwest.

Modern D.C.-to-Harrisonburg 'Pony Express' Given Send-Off

A new streamlined "pony express" on wheels was given a send-off by Vice President Wallace, Postmaster General Walker and Congressional leaders yesterday at the Capitol.

The express is a shiny red, blue and silver bus, decked inside with postal equipment hitherto reserved for railway mail cars—and in practice it will be not an express but a local, taking mail between Washington and Harrisonburg, Va., and the towns between.

Its first trip on the 142-mile run will start from the Washington City Postoffice, North Capitol and Massachusetts Avenue, at 5:30 a. m. Monday and arrive in Harrisonburg at 11 a. m. The return trip starts from Harrisonburg at 4 p. m., to arrive in Washington at 9:30 p. m. From then on the run will be made daily except Sunday.

The new Highway Postal Service was authorized by Congress and approved by the President last July. Postal officials described the Harrisonburg-Washington route as "experimental," and said the service would be given a six or eight months test before new routes are opened.

Supplementary Service

Purpose of the highway service is to supplement existing railway mail service, officials said. It was pointed out that but one mail train runs daily each way between Harrisonburg and Washington. Formerly there were three.

Vice President Wallace and Postmaster General Walker both helped load the postal bus with a supply of letters for its first trip. With them were Senator Byrd (Democrat), of Virginia, Senator McKellar (Democrat), of Tennessee, chairman of the Senate Postoffices and Post Roads Committee, and Representative Robertson (Democrat), of Virginia.

Among Wallace's letters was one to Col. Edwin A. Halsey, secretary to the Senate.

Besides the bus exhibited at the Capitol, the Postoffice Department has two others on order. They are 33 feet long, streamlined, equipped inside with racks for mailbags, boxes for distributing letters, and safety belts for the postal clerks who will be on duty during the run.

Among the towns where the Highway Postal Service will make regular stops are: Arlington, Fairfax, Middleburg, Marshall, Front Royal, Strasburg, Fishers Hill, Toms Brook, Woodstock, Edinburg, Mount Jackson and New Market.

Lonely Laddie . . .

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

Saved From Rat-Infested Room, Man Found to Have $43,000

Feeble, bewildered George Henry Wood, who lived past the age when man can deal with life alone, is going to be all right from now on.

He is already well fed and sleeps warm of nights, at St. Elizabeths Hospital. For the rest of his life he will be having the little extra things that mean so much to a man 83 years old—candy, tobacco and fruit, with an automobile ride now and then. It will come out of his own money, money he saved in the years he was a Navy Department clerk.

He has $43,000.

Yet when the police found him a few months ago he was living in a filthy, gloomy, rat-infested room. Jumbled about his squalid quarters were his keepsakes of brighter, warmer years before.

Only Kin Two Cousins

There were a rake, a lawn mower and a scythe. There were a stickpin and a gold watch. He had "half a truck load" of newspapers and magazines. There were Christmas cards from his only relatives, two cousins, Mrs. Anna Elizabeth Johnson, 76, and Mrs. Mabel Carolina Barney, 72, both of West Medford, Mass. There was $1,500 in cash and pension checks.

But when the police found the old man wandering in the streets, he had forgotten the significance of all these things. So the Commission on Mental Health called his mind unsound and sent him to the hospital.

Attorney Harlan Wood was assigned by the District Court to wind up the affairs of the supposed pauper. He spent $30 to fumigate the filthy room and went to work. Rats had consumed part of the mattress.

Bank Deposits Found

Reporting yesterday to Justice T. Alan Goldsborough, Attorney Wood said his client has $20,945 in the Perpetual Building and Loan Association here and $21,300 in six Massachusetts banks. He recommended that $100 be spent on clothes and shoes for the old man and $25 a month allotted for extras "to comfort his declining years."

The assets had been discovered by tedious sorting of the junk in the room, followed by weeks of correspondence to check up on documents and books that were found. Justice Goldsborough praised the lawyer's diligence and ordered that he be paid a $1,000 fee.
